Cub fan wonders, will they last this year?

Ernest McMillan ordered his usual Hamm's and took a seat at the circular bar directly across from the television.

He wasn't sitting on the stool exactly. It was more like leaning up against it, with one foot dangling and the other planted solidly on the floor.

He glanced toward the TV. The color image wasn't great because the horizontal kept flipping, but it was functional. The game was in the eighth inning, and the Cubs, behind some tough pitching by ace Rick Reuschel, were leading 3-0.

"I THINK THE Cubs are going to hang on today," someone said.

McMillan paused as his beer came to discard the paper cup and take a sip from the can.

"I sure hope so," he said. "But then, they should have had it yesterday. They had a seven-run lead yesterday. They won anyway though, but they had a seven-run lead."

He lifted the can of beer for another sip. The New Cubby Bear Lounge across the street from Wrigley Field wasn't very crowded. The crowds would come in a couple more innings.

For now, there were only a handful of customers, all male and all — except for McMillan — young, in their early 20s, including the pinball wizards and the juke box addicts.

McMILLAN WASN'T interested in the atmosphere or the sounds. He peered hard in the dark room through his plastic-frame sunglasses toward the television.

He is 68, a retired chef and cook, and for 50 years, he has lived and died with the Cubs. Three or four times a week, he goes to the park. It has been a difficult affinity.

He remembers 1969, the Cubs last big run at the flag. "They just blew it, that's all I can figure," he says, and he spent many an autumn night then turning in his bed, unable to sleep while he tried to analyze the fold. It was, he finally decided, because of bad managing by Leo Durocher.

But McMillan remembers little of 1945, the last year the Cubs won the pennant. He was in the service then. He didn't get discharged until Oct. 8, 1945.

THE GAME ON the set quietly slipped out of the eighth, and the Reds came up for their last chance.

"The World Series was over then," McMillan continued. "I missed it on account of being in the service."

He wiped his upper lip. It was still beaded with perspiration like the rest of his face. It had been hot as usual out in the bleachers. That's one rea-

Juror sees fate in Anderson trial

by KEN VANDERBEEK

For Donald Ring, the murder of Phyllis Anderson is more than a tragedy heavily laced with racial overtones.

It is the year-long saga of two incredible twists of fate that first put him a few blocks away from the 51-year-old woman the day she was murdered and then put him in a position to help convict her killer.

On that fateful day, June 13, 1976 Ring, principal of Elk Grove High School, was driving back to his Arlington Heights home from Michigan with his family when his car was forced off the Dan Ryan Expressway by a heavy rainstorm. He drove into an unfamiliar neighborhood on 87th Street on Chicago's South Side.

It was the same rainstorm that forced Leo Anderson to pull his car off the expressway on to 69th Street near Harvard Avenue. It was there Anderson's car became stalled in a flooded viaduct, was attacked by a gang of rock-throwing black youths and his wife was murdered by a 31-year-old iron worker, Marrion Logan.

BUT RING WAS more fortunate. "We were helped by several black youths," said Ring of 415 E. Ivy Ln. "When I look back I realize had there not been this completely opposite set of circumstances that night, we might have been in a similar predicament as the Andersons."

The second twist of fate came last week when Ring was called to serve with 11 other persons on the jury which Monday found Logan guilty of murdering Mrs. Anderson. He was elected foreman of the jury of seven men and five women.

When it was over, Ring said the trial had affected him "immensely" because had it not been for a "reversal of fate," he might have encountered the same kind of violence which led to the murder of Mrs. Anderson.

Ring said serving on the jury gave him the chance to make sure the Anderson family received justice.

BUT RING, who was the first juror selected in the trial and later chosen the jury's foreman, said he was lucky to have been selected.

"During my interview with Judge (James) Bailey I could have told him I was forced off the Dan Ryan Expressway the same day the Andersons were," Ring said. "But I didn't mention the incident because the judge might have thought it would have prejudiced my views."

Ring said "The many contradictions in Logan's testimony and the consistency of the testimony of the prosecution's witnesses" never left any doubt Logan was guilty of murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"I am convinced that he (Logan) was willing to lie," Ring said. "I looked at him several times, though, and was amazed at how calm he was. He was very placid the whole time."

RING SAID HE and the other jurors tried to reason why Logan, a rising businessman in the black community, would commit such a murder.

"I think the incident involved extreme racial prejudice," Ring said. "But none of us (the jury) could figure out what kind of person he is.

"In fact, one of the only things we learned about his background was that he belongs to some black Hebrew sect associated with some lost tribe of Israel," he said.

Now that the trial is over, Ring said he is ready to lead a normal life again with his wife, Sonja, and two sons, Todd, 14, and Timothy, 11, whom he saw only once during the week-long trial.

Tax gas: GAO

The General Accounting Office said Tuesday President Carter's energy plan will fall short of its 1985 goals for coal, natural gas and nuclear energy production. To toughen the program, GAO urged Congress to revive and pass a standby gasoline tax of 50 cents a gallon. — Page 3.

'For sale' signs tell of change

by NANCY GOTLER

Ronald Bradley sat in the S. Arlington Heights Road home built by his great-grandfather, reminiscing about the past and worrying about the future.

"There was a time when we knew everybody in Arlington Heights by first name," the retired 75-year-old lifetime resident said. "But there's been an awful lot of change since then. I'm not against it, but I am concerned about the future."

Those changes — the increased traffic congestion and noise — plus health problems have forced Bradley to consider selling his home at 1355 S. Arlington Heights Rd. where four generations of his family have lived.

His brother, Curtis, 73, already has two "For sale" signs in the front yard of his home next door. "For sale" signs also stand on several vacant lots along Arlington Heights Road, advertising the land's potential for commercial development.

Once the sales are made it will be the first time in more than 130 years that the Bradley family won't own the land that was once part of the Bradley farms.

CURTIS IS ASKING $150,000 for his 1.25-acre lot, considerably more than the $275 per acre his father was paid for 80 acres east of Arlington Heights Road in the 1920s. That area since has been developed as a subdivision.

"I'm not anxious to sell, but if the price is right, I will," Ronald said. "It would bother me not to have my family living on this land, but you can't live forever."

The Bradley family has been influencing local history and politics since the 1840s when Peter Bradley, the brothers' great-grandfather, moved from New York to Illinois.

IN 1854 THE FLEDGLING community was named Bradley by William Dunton, son of the village's founder, as a tribute to his close friend.

But as soon as it was learned another Illinois town already was called Bradley the name was changed to Dunton and later to Arlington Heights. "I could have been living in a town named for me on a street named for me," Ronald said.

Ronald and Curtis remember stories about their great-grandfather building the upper two stories of the house with hand-hewn white oak timbers.

"In the attic walls we found newspapers from the 1840s he had used as insulation," Ronald said.

And in 1894 Peter donated the house he owned at 310 N. Dunton Ave. for use as the first village library.

LATER, THEIR FATHER, Timothy, was born in the house at 1355 S.

5 bomb blasts rip pipeline; oil flow OK

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UPI) — At least five bomb blasts ripped through insulation on the Alaska pipeline and additional unexploded blasting caps were found at the scene, but the explosions did not interrupt oil flowing south from Prudhoe Bay, the Alaska state police reported Tuesday.

The damage, north of Fairbanks, was discovered Monday night during a routine security check, but apparently took place several days earlier, police said.

"We do know it was an external explosion," an FBI investigator said. "Somekne had to set something. Someone had to put something there."

STATE POLICE SAID the blasts tore 20 to 30 yards of insulation off a section of the $9 billion, 800-mile pipeline.

"The blast appears to have occurred a period of days before we got the report last (Monday) night," said Lt. George Pollitt. "There was extensive damage to upwards of 20 or 30 yards of insulation, torn away from the pipe.

"It was definitely a substantial explosive device of some sort and there was more than one."

The blasts did not penetrate the half-inch thick pipe. They were not detected by Alyeska Pipeline earthquate monitors.

A STATEMENT ISSUED by Alyeska minimized the damage, stating that two pipeline brackets and some insulation had been ripped away. Alyeska also said it would issue no further statements because the blasts were being investigated by law enforcement authorities.

Initially, a spokesman for Alyeska had denied the existence of the blasts.

"There's been no explosion," was the first reaction of John Ratterman, head of public relations of Alyeska.

Later, when it was definitely learned that there had been some damage, Alyeska spokesman Larry Carpenter speculated that the problem was coused by lightning.

The oil, making its initial journey down the pipeline, is expected to arrive Friday at the port of Valdez. The line has been shut down five times, once because of an explosion which killed one man at Pump Station No. 8, near Fairbanks. The pump house will have to be replaced at a cost of more than $20 million.

Guerrillas' aid rejected in hunt for Scouts' killer

PRYOR, Okla. (UPI) — A county sheriff Tuesday said a proposed posse of Vietnam War guerrilla fighters might "get someone killed" rather than capture the murderer of three Girl Scouts.

Sheriff Pete Weaver said the offer by the jungle-trained Vietnam veterans, who call themselves the "Spooks," was appreciated but had been turned down.

"I would discourage that type of thing right now because of the dense terrain and the large amount of area to be covered," Weaver said. "The people in that area (Locust Grove, Okla.) are uptight and we're likely to get someone killed.

"LORD, THERE'S thousands of acres down there."

Oklahoma City attorney Tom Kite Monday said he and his friends wanted to search for Gene Leroy Hart, 33, the escaped rapist charged with killing Scouts Lori Lee Farmer, Doris Denise Milner and Michelle Guse.

The bodies of the three Tulsa-area girls were found near their tent June 13 at Camp Scott. Two of the girls had been beaten to death and the third had been strangled. All three girls had been sexually molested.

Officers and volunteers searched the foothills of the Ozarks for two weeks following the murders without success. Hart remained free and officers believe he is still hiding in the wooded area around Locust Grove, perhaps receiving assistance from friends and relatives.

Kite said it would not take more than eight hours for his "Spooks" to find Hart. He said the volunteers had kept their jungle warfare skills honed through National Guard duty since returning from Southeast Asia.

"I CALL THEM spooks because we can do some pretty spooky things," Kite said. "We're Vietnam vets who have had special training in various and sundry types of jungle warfare."

Columbo case sentencing delayed

Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham said Tuesday he has postponed sentencing for Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca from Aug. 1 to Aug. 8.

Pincham said DeLuca's attorney asked for the delay so he could have more time to prepare post-trial motions.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were convicted July 1 of murdering her father, mother and brother in their Elk Grove Village home May 4, 1976.

Maywood's police strike revives bad memories for Margaret Steel.

Maywood strike revives memory

by BILL HILL

Margaret Steel remembers all too well the night she was mugged.

"I had just gotten off the bus. I was working downtown then. I had two jobs," she said. "Anyway, I noticed a man walking behind me, and then I couldn't hear him anymore. I turned around and he was there. He put his arm around my neck and twisted one of my arms behind my back. Then he threw me down."

That was nearly 10 years ago, but the memory suddenly is very vivid for the 68-year-old Maywood woman now that police there have gone on strike.

MRS. STEEL said she wasn't so worried Tuesday afternoon as she sat on a bench in downtown Maywood awaiting a bus to Triton College in nearby River Grove, but she said she was concerned about her return home that evening.

"It disturbs me in that I've been held up and wound up in the hospital for three months with a broken pelvis that we don't have police protection," she said.

But it's not only the memory of being attacked and robbed 10 years ago that bothers her.

"We have too many different things going on right now to feel very safe. Just recently somebody got into our building and disconnected all the wires for the telephones in my building. So we went three or four days without telephone service. And we've had to move our mailboxes inside so they won't be rifled," said Mrs. Steel, a lifelong resident of Maywood.

SINCE MAYWOOD police officers began calling in sick Monday afternoon with the "blue flu," supervisory personnel — 10 sergeants and lieutenants — have divided into five-man squads working 12-hour shifts. Cook County sheriff's police also have been patrolling the town.

Talks between the village and the patrolmen's union broke off Monday night when the village's latest contract offer was rejected by the 38 patrolmen, who are members of the Combined Counties Police Assn.

The two main issues in the dispute are that Maywood police haven't had a pay raise in two years and the wage scale under which it takes a police officer 12 years to reach patrolman's top pay.

Mrs. Steel and several other Maywood residents Tuesday were sympathetic with the officers' demands. Some were not bothered at all by the reduced police protection.

"IT'S NO BIG deal," said William Eyeman, 64, who has lived in Maywood 50 years. "I've seen the other (supervisory) guys out patrolling a bunch of times today."

Eyeman and Jerry Donahue, a bus driver, agreed the patrolmen should receive pay comparable with other suburban communities.

"What's good for one should be good for another," Donahue said.

The police have "good reason" to strike, Firefighter Larry Miller said.

"Last year the police and firemen were told to hold tight — that we'd get a raise this year, but now they say that was the promise of a previous administration and previous village manager," Miller said.

Maywood police and firefighters have not been given a raise since May 1975.

THE STRIKE BY police, Miller said, will make Maywood an easy target for criminals.

"Of course, you can't predict whether crime will go up, but there probably are some outside criminals just waiting for something like this. It's because of the outsiders that come in and cause trouble that Maywood has a bad reputation," Miller said.

Margaret Steel also fears crime may increase.

"It probably could happen, but I don't want to think about it," she said. "If you let yourself get afraid, then you're sunk."

GAO urges Congress to toughen Carter energy plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Urging Congress to get tough, the General Accounting Office Tuesday said President Carter's energy plan will fall short of its 1985 goals for coal, natural gas and nuclear energy production and imported oil cutbacks.

To toughen the program, the GAO urged Congress to revive and pass a standby gasoline tax proposal which could add 50 cents a gallon if conservation goals are not met.

Energy experts of the agency, the investigatory arm of Congress, also urged a phase-out of Carter's proposed heating oil tax rebate to homeowners, higher prices for natural gas and consideration of measures to encourage the scrapping of inefficient used cars.

HOUSE COMMITTEES already have killed the standby gasoline tax and weakened other parts of the President's program. The full House hopes to pass its version by Aug. 5 with the Senate voting later.

The GAO said oil imports in 1985 are likely to be 10.3 million barrels a day, not the 6 million proposed in the Carter plan.

Coal production appears "highly unlikely" to reach 1 billion tons annually, "let alone the administration's goal of 1.2 billion tons," the GAO said.

Nuclear plants can not be built as fast as the Carter plan requires and natural gas production was overstated by 10 per cent.

THE CARTER PLAN is "more a fuel switching program than a conservation program," relying too heavily on voluntary restraints, the GAO said.

Despite the criticism, the GAO said the plan's basic concepts are sound and its passage is long overdue.

In other energy developments:

• The Federal Energy Administration said it is investigating accusations some of its employes submitted false overtime slips, went on junkets and stole $300 calculators. A spokesman said the investigation, started five months ago, was centered in the agency's office of information and policy.

• Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., proposed legislation to keep the oil companies out of the coal and uranium industries.

The bill "says that major oil companies, which have already effectively made competition a dead letter in the oil industry, should not have the opportunity to work their will on other industries," Kennedy said.

The information is being sought by publishers of "Midnight" which published a story accusing Mrs. Exner of spying on Kennedy for Mafia figures with whom she had affairs. Mrs. Exner is suing the magazine for libel, saying the accusation she was a Mafia spy was false.

• Joan Mondale Tuesday challenged critics who say the federal government is spending its money on large, elitist art projects and neglecting individual artisans. The wife of the Vice President said in San Antonio, Tex., she is working to increase direct grants to local artists and to build appreciation of arts and crafts by most Americans. "It's not just for the wealthy people or educated people," she said. "The federal government has been very careful in spending its money wisely and judiciously and democratically."

• Amy Carter has completed a special summer course for "gifted children" at George Washington University and will head home to Plains, Ga., Friday for a vacation with her two grandmothers. First Lady Rosalynn Carter said her 9-year-old daughter was "very enthusiastic" about the course.

Carter tax reform unpopular: poll

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most Americans oppose income tax simplification similar to proposals under review by the Carter administration, a public opinion poll showed Tuesday.

The poll also showed that most Americans believe their own taxes are too high while others, especially business and the rich, pay less than their share.

The survey was made by the Roper Organization at a cost of $60,000 for H&R Block Inc., a firm that prepares income tax forms.

Burns Roper, head of the Roper Organization, told a press conference that "people have a fuzzy and unclear perception of taxes . . . They respond to what they think will lower their own taxes."

ROPER SAID a conclusion from the survey, believed to be the first of its kind, was that President Carter will have a "difficult" time selling tax simplification to the public, especially if it means an end to deductions for home mortgage interest and local property taxes.

When taxpayers are given the alternative of the present system or one that Carter seems to be favoring — elimination of most, if not all, deductions — the majority favors the present system.

The majority also prefers the present system despite a promise of a lower tax rate, Roper said.

ROPER SAID most of those surveyer "feel that the middle and lower income groups aer overtaxed, while the upper income group and large business corporations are seen as undertaxed."

Most taxpayers also believed people paid about 12 to 14 per cent of their income in federal taxes regardless of income bracket. This is counter to evidence gathered by the Internal Revenue Service which shows wide variations with the upper income levels paying significantly higher taxes.

There are publicized cases of a few millionaires who escape taxation each year and some wealthy persons who pay low taxes.

ALTHOUGH THE IRS reports audits of less than 3 per cent of all taxpayers including corporations, Roper said 20 per cent of the persons questioned for the survey last May indicated their income tax returns had been audited.

Most of these people believed they were treated fairly, although some had to pay a higher tax as a result of the audit.

But Roper said one-third of all people surveyed believed that audits were unfair and were more favorable to the wealthy than other classes of taxpayer. This view prevailed although most individuals expressing this view apparently had no first-hand knowledge of the audit system.

The Roper survey also compared favorably with IRS data that three-fourths of all taxpayers hire accountants, lawyers or others to prepare their returns.

Die-hard Cub fan wonders, will the team last this year?

son he generally leaves in the late innings, to stop at the Cubby Bear or at another bar down the street.

He stops in the restroom and then gets a beer — just one — before hopping the bus back home a few blocks away.

THE BEER, he said, twisting the can, is always Hamm's. No particular reason except that in '45 or '46, the others went on strike for a while, he ordered one and stayed with it.

There were two outs now, and George Foster came up. If the Cubs won today, they would hang onto first place. But, McMillan said, he knew that didn't mean they'd stay there.

"You just kind of figure, well, they're going to do the same thing like every year," he said, leaning more toward the floor. "Every year, they have a good beginning and then they get bad in the second half.

"I don't know. I hope they don't blow it. I really hope not. I hope they can hold out. But their pitching, I don't know if it'll hold out."

FOSTER SLAPPED a sharp grounder to the right side; the horizontal flipped again, as the first baseman reached for it. It flipped back in time to show Reuschel taking the toss for the last out.

Toward the back, somebody yelled, "They won," but McMillan showed no emotion. He finished his beer — he had nursed it well — and put it on the bar.

"I gotta beat it now. They'll all be coming over," he said. "I like to beat the rush."

Thompson gave Dems jobs: GOP

by STEVE BROWN

Of our Springfield Bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Republican Gov. James R. Thompson distributed as many as 40 jobs to Cook County Democrats in exchange for help in getting bills passed in the Illinois General Assembly, Republican party sources say.

GOP party leaders are heaping harsh criticism on the governor for handing out patronage jobs to Democrats.

The criticism plus earlier disclosures of illegal hiring by the Illinois Liquor Commission threatens to force the third major overhaul of the patronage system in the six-month-old Thompson administration.

The barrage of criticism was leveled at Jack Perone, one of five Thompson patronage dispensers, during a closed door conference earlier this month at Lake Geneva, Wis.

SUBURBAN REPUBLICAN legislators and GOP township committees were angered over reports Democrats got state jobs through Democratic lawmakers during the close of the legislative session in June, while Republicans were being ignored.

Perone said jobs were given to Democratic legislators, but he insisted only 10 positions were involved.

"I answered their questions and explained the policy. Sometimes that is the way things happen through the legislative process," Perone said.

He declined to spell out who got what jobs for supporting which bills.

Most Republican leaders refused to comment on the private meeting with Perone or on the patronage problems.

However, The Herald has learned the grievances include:

• Summer jobs with the Illinois Dept. of Transportation which were given to Democrats, while a request from Cook County GOP Chairman Harold Tyrrell was turned down.

• State Rep. Ted Leverenz, D-Maywood, was successful in getting people hired although his district, once controlled by Republicans, is targeted by the GOP as one that can be recaptured next year.

• Party leaders are being bypassed for advice when applicants are being considered.

• Chicago Republicans are getting their requests for patronage filled, while the suburban GOP strongholds are being ignored.

Revamping the patronage operation became more likely when it was learned two men, with Republican sponsors were hired illegally as investigators by the Illinois Liquor Commission. Both men had interests in taverns. State records show neither is on the state payroll.

Thompson already has shifted his patronage office around three times since taking office in January. His first patronage boss was shuffled to the Illinois Tollway Authority and the second was fired after it was learned he had records doctored which showed he used state airplanes for private and political trips while making it appear he was on state business.

THE THIRD, Zale Glauberman, also serves as Thompson's chief lobbyist. The windfall of jobs for Democratic lawmakers began after Glauberman took over the patronage post, sources said.

Leverenz confirmed he has had some success in making hiring recommendations, but insisted he did not trade votes for jobs and the positions were not high paying posts.

Several Thompson aides admitted privately a new patronage chief is needed to straighten out the situation.

During his campaign, Thompson said he would work with party leaders, but there have been consistent reports that county chairmen are not being consulted about appointments even when Republicans are selected.

Seith announces for Percy's seat

Alex Seith, a Hinsdale lawyer described as a behind-the-scenes powerhouse in the Democratic party, announced Tuesday he will seek the United States seat now held by Charles Percy. Seith announced his candidacy in a nine-city flyaround starting in Aurora, where he was born. Even before he announced, however, Seith already was embroiled in a dispute with Anthony R. Martin-Trigona about whether Seith has failed to file legally required federal campaign disclosure reports.

Martin-Trigona, who announced his candidacy for the Democratic Senate nomination earlier, said he will file suit against Seith as a result of the alleged failure. Seith said his lawyers have told him he is in compliance with rules and laws covering prospective candidates. Seith, celebrating his 43rd birthday, is a specialist in international law and a former president of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations. He also is chairman of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Road contractors suspended

Four construction companies were suspended Tuesday from receiving state road contracts for six months and three other firms were fined $108,000 for rigging bids on construction projects at O'Hare International Airport. In Springfield, Illinois Transportation Sec. John Kramer said four construction companies guilty of bid rigging will get no road contract involving state funds or approval before Dec. 20. The firms are the Brighton Building and Maintenance Co., Chicago, Krug Excavating Co., Chicago, Union Contracting and Material Co., LaGrange, and Western Asphalt and Paving Co., Hodgkins. Kramer said the six-month suspension is being imposed retroactively to June 21, the day after the four firms pleaded guilty to federal bid-rigging charges in connection with 1974 and 1975 O'Hare projects.

FBI, police hunt elderly gunman

A man described as 65 or 70 years old broke into a Trilla, Ill. auto garage, fired three shots at a witness and abducted a garage worker Tuesday. Deputies from Coles and Cumberland counties, FBI agents and the state police spent most of Tuesday searching homes and barns in the area, but failed to find the white-haired man, police said. The gunman abandoned a pick-up truck a mile and a half northeast of Trilla, fled on foot and released his hostage, Ken Fritts unharmed. Witness Mark Heath of Trilla also was unharmed. The gunman was described as white haired, between 65 and 70, 5-foot-10 and about 165 to 170 pounds. He was wearing a blue jacket. One deputy said the gunman was "armed to the teeth." Trilla is on the border of Coles and Cumberland counties, about 10 miles south of Mattoon.

Sewage threat not proved: lawyer

A lawyer for the Milwaukee area's sewage treatment agencies said Tuesday Illinois failed to prove its case in its lawsuit to stop the discharge of raw sewage into Lake Michigan. The lawsuit charges partly treated sewage Milwaukee discharges into the lake is a threat to the health of Illinois residents and a public nuisance. In his closing argument in U.S. District Court, Ewald Moerke Jr., attorney for the Milwaukee Sewage Commission, said Illinois failed to prove the sewage poses "a clear and convincing immediate harm" to Illinois residents.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott filed the suit in 1972 and the trial has run four-and-a-half months. Moerke said Illinos lawyers should have tried to work out a solution to the problem before taking it to court.

No Dist. 214 closings 'important'

by PAM BIGFORD THOMAS

Rod McLennan believes what High School Dist. 214 Board of Education members did not say about physical improvements for the district's eight high schools is more important than what they did say.

"They didn't tell us to close down a building" to cope with declining enrollment, McLennan, assistant superintendent said Tuesday. "That was the most important thing."

An administration committee chaired by McLennan Monday showed the board preliminary improvement plans ranging from extensive renovations of Arlington and Forest View high schools to swimming pools for the five schools that do not have them.

IT WAS A report in the fall of 1975 that showed Dist. 214's enrollment declining by 22 per cent by 1984-85 that halted plans for the improvements and started talk of school closings. But since January the board has talked in terms of juggling boundaries to keep all schools open, and McLennan said the board's reaction now to the improvement plan is consistent with its claim that no schools will be closed.

Although board members urged the administration to be as economical as possible and to take declining enrollment into consideration when making its final recommendations next month, they voiced no objections to any of the improvements.

With the board's tentative approval, McLennan said his administration committee is beginning a detailed analysis of each building's needs in terms of its future enrollment and is awaiting cost figures on each improvement from the Illinois Capitol Development Board.

McLENNAN CALLED the plan presented Monday the "optimum" kind that would work under any situation. Now the committee is ready to refine the report by looking at various options and finding the best, least expensive improvements.

"We expect to come back to the board in a month with a reduced request," he said.

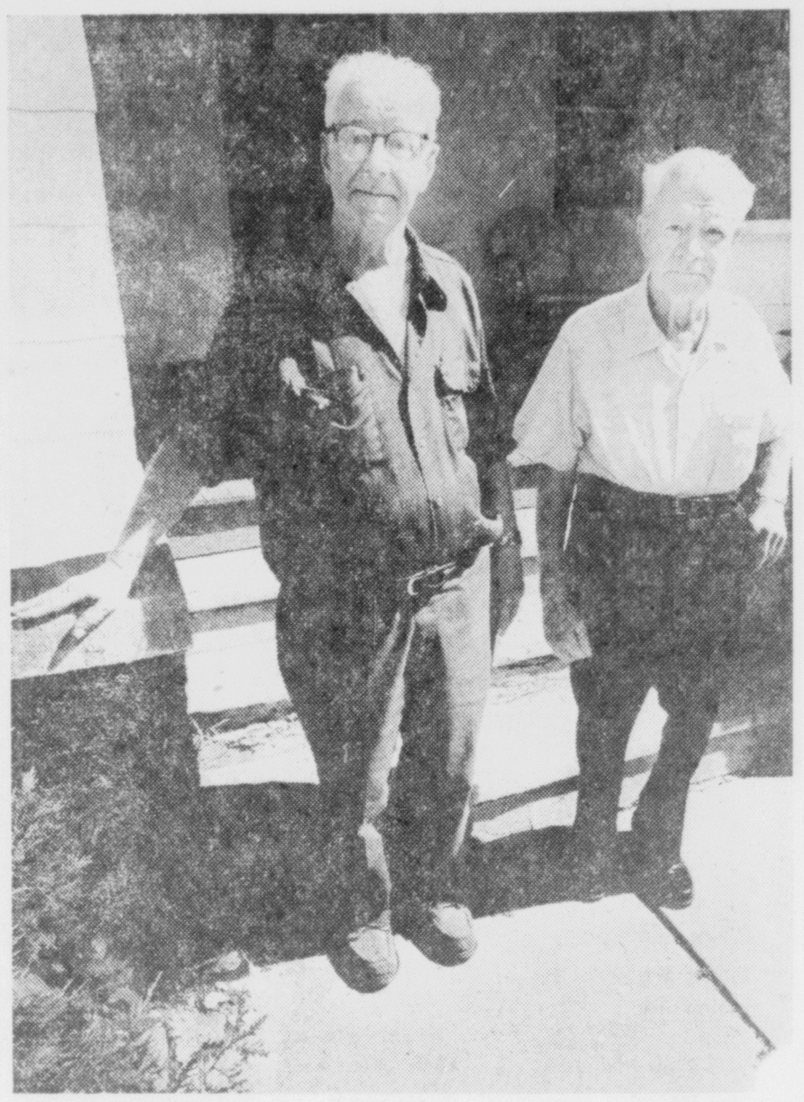
Although Board Pres. Jack Costello estimated the cost of the improvements, which would have to be approved by voters in a referendum, might reach $30 million, McLennan said it is his goal to keep the cost under that figure.

He said the committee will look at cutting costs by centralizing some facilities, such as power mechanics, rather than having them at each school, and will talk to High School Dist. 211 and Harper College to determine whether sharing facilities might save money.

McLENNAN SAID some improvements have been required by law. New federal guidelines for equalizing physical education for boys and girls have made present gym facilities inadequate, he said. Some special education changes have been mandated too.

McLennan said the improvements may seem extensive but the list has been pared down from recommendations by a 1975 citizens committee and requests from building principals.

Already rejected among others, were requests for greenhouses; more outside storage and maintenance space; additional fencing; foreign language kitchens; additional land purchases; and multi-purpose lecture areas.



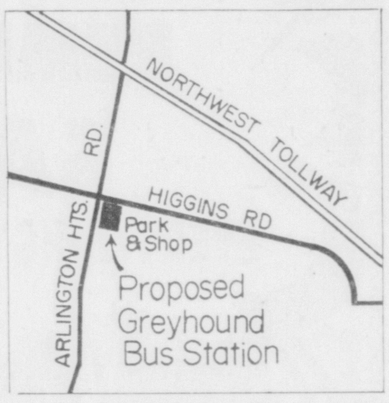
BROTHERS RONALD, left, and Curtis Bradley remember growing up in Arlington Heights when it was a farm town. But they may soon move from their old homes because of poor health and annoying traffic.

Greyhound finds new depot site

After one site was leased out from under its wheels, the Greyhound Bus Co. has found another place for a Northwest suburban station.

This time it's the Park and Shop Shopping Center at Arlington Heights and Higgins roads in Elk Grove Village, said Greyhound's Robert J. Wallace, "a much better site to handle both passengers and packages."

It will probably be late fall before the new terminal opens because the village's plan commission will not act on Greyhound's proposal until after a public hearing Aug. 17. "It takes 30 or 45 days more" to receive final approvals and remodel the office, Wallace said.



WHEN THE STATION is opened, seven or eight buses will stop there each day as they travel the Northwest Tollway between Chicago and Rockford, he said.

Greyhound's nearest stops are in Elgin, Northbrook and Skokie. Although the bus line does not expect heavy passenger traffic, Wallace has estimated that an Elk Grove Village station could generate $5,000 to $6,000 per month in parcel business.

That's because the nearby Elk Grove Village industrial park generates about 3 million pounds of freight each month, much of it in small packages.

Last December, Greyhound selected a site in the industrial park, received all the necessary approvals from the village and scheduled a May opening.

BUT THE PROSPECTIVE landlord "got tired of the Greyhound company fooling around" and leased the space to another tenant. Wallace said only that "internal problems" had prevented Greyhound from signing a lease.

He said the company does not have a lease for its Park and Shop site but will sign one if the village approves of its plans.

Earlier, the company considered sites in Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Arlington Heights before selecting Elk Grove Village "to get a good blend of passengers and freight," Wallace said.

"Elk Grove is the most logical place for us because of the heavy concentration of industry," he said.

Arlington Heights Road. He enlarged the building in the 1880s and worked as a farmer, using the first steam thrashing machine in the area.

"I remember Grandpa saying when he used the thrasher the neighbors wouldn't come near him because they were afraid the machine would blow up," Curtis said.

The brothers' father, Fred J. Bradley, was born in the house in 1880 and in 1921 put up his 116-acre farm as collateral so Arlington High School could be built.

"Most of the farmers around here didn't want their children to have a high school education," Ronald said. "They were dead set against the whole idea because they were afraid their kids would leave the farm. But our father thought school was important and got his way."

HE EVENTUALLY was elected to the Arlington Heights Dist. 214 Board of Education and in 1940 as Elk Grove Township highway commissioner.

When his father died in 1952, Ronald was appointed highway commissioner and elected to the post for the next 20 years.

"We never thought things would change this much," Ronald said. "When we lived here as children Arlington Heights Road was a country dirt road.

"I remember my parents insisting that Arlington Heights would never grow south of South Street," he said. "But things have changed."

"There are a lot of good memories and a lot of hard work in this house. I don't want to give it up but some day soon I may have to," he said. "That's progress — something my family never stood in the way of. Somehow I think they all would understand."

City takes no stand on night racing

The Rolling Meadows City Council Tuesday night decided to take no stand on night harness racing at Arlington Park Race Track.

Although Ald. Thomas Menzel, 1st, said residents of his ward opposed it, no other aldermen had objections to night harness racing.

"Outside of traffic, any activity at Arlington Park only affects the north end of the city," Ald. Kenneth Retzke, 5th, said.

ALD. BILLY McMINN, 2nd, whose ward is on the city's north side, has opposed proposed plans to control traffic that would result from night harness racing and has said the city was left out of discussions between track officials and homeowners groups in other towns. McMinn had no objections Tuesday night.

Arlington Park officials have applied to the Illinois Racing Board for 64 of the 71 night harness racing dates originally given to Washington Park in Homewood, which was destroyed by fire in February.

The board is expected to award the dates Aug. 1 to one of the 11 tracks that have applied for them.

Aldermen and other city officials met with Joseph Joyce of Arlington Park-Washington Park Race Track last week to discuss the potential problems of night racing.

MENZEL TOLD the council Tuesday that Ed Naskie, president of the Rolling-Hicks Homeowners Assn., has a petition opposing night racing. Naskie plans to send the petition to the Illinois Racing Board.

Menzel also had a letter from Harold Brissenden of the Plum Grove Village Assn. saying the association considered night racing "at the very least a nuisance to our area."

Brissenden said the track's plan to close the exits at Euclid Avenue and Wilke Road in an attempt to channel all traffic out to Rohlwing Road and to "shield the Village of Arlington from the traffic is unconscionable."

He also complained that race track officials talked to "several citizens groups and the state commission before bothering to consider Rolling Meadows at all. It is time we grew up to command a position of respect."

Menzel said he expected the council to approve night racing "but with the amount of negative feedback I've gotten, obviously I can't support it."

The Palatine Village Board Monday voted 6 to 1 to oppose night racing. Arlington Heights has approved it.

OOPS! SOMEBODY tugged too hard and the rope snapped. The tug-of-war was one of many games played by the more than 100 Girl Scouts attending day camp at St. Alphonsus School, 411 N. Shuttle bus firm asks to expand service route

A shuttle bus company has asked permission to expand its service between the Stonebridge apartment complex, 600 W. Rand Rd., and the Chicago and North Western Ry. train station to allow it to pick up passengers along the route.

Commuters Shuttle Systems of Downers Grove wants to be able to pick up persons who don't live at the complex on its nine daily runs for a monthly fee of $12.

Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said Village Atty. Jack Siegel has been asked to review the request before the trustees act on it.

Four morning trains between 6:42 and 7:45 a.m. are served from the apartment complex and five evening trains from 5:23 to 7:01 p.m. are met.

Frank McCreary, transportation adviser for the company which offers service to and from train stations, said the company transported more than one million passengers last year and expects to carry 1.5 million this year.

He said the increase in passengers to and from Stonebridge Apartments was requested because there are vacancies on the buses.

The company operates in 11 other cities and receives subsidies from the Regional Transportation Authority in five towns, he said.

Mourners pay final tribute to slaying victim

WATERBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Hundreds of somber friends and relatives paid their last respects Tuesday to a 6-year-old girl slain in Connecticut's worst mass murder.

The mourners attended a mass for Jennifer Sage Santoro at Our Lady of Loreto Church, staring grimly at her ivory white casket covered with pink, purple and white flowers.

"Death always comes too soon," the Rev. Francis Ford, a close friend of the family, said after a mass punctuated by the sobs of Jennifer's relatives.

Jennifer, an only child, was killed last Friday during an overnight visit to her aunt, Cheryl Beaudoin, 29, and the seven Beaudoin children.

LORNE ACQUIN, 27, has been charged with beating the eight children, stabbing the mother and then setting the house on fire.

"She was a very nice little girl," the Rev. Ford said. "She was very affectionate, very outgoing."

Attending the funeral were Jennifer's father, Louis Santoro; her mother, Mary Lou Barber, and stepfather, Gene Barber.

The stepfather, who sobbed repeatedly during the mass, had dropped Jennifer off at the Beaudoin home to spend the night last Friday.

Fred Beaudoin, 32, still grieving over the loss of his wife and children, remained at his mother's home. Acquin is his foster brother and often stayed at the Beaudoin home.

Mrs. Beaudoin and her children will be buried in Prospect Wednesday. A strike by gravediggers at Roman Catholic cemeteries delayed Jennifer's burial at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Outside the church, 12-year-old altar boy Jeff Weir recalled Jennifer. "She used to play with my friend's little sister," he said. "She was a real good little kid."

Space shuttle set for Aug. 12 flight

The space shuttle Enterprise, bolted to the top of a Boeing 747 and carrying two astronauts, completed its final captive test flight Tuesday with only minor hitches, paving the way for its first free flight next month. On Aug. 12, the Enterprise is scheduled to be blasted loose from the mother ship and glide to a landing, prefacing further tests that will eventually lead to the space shuttle's journey into space. Astronauts Gordon Fullerton, the pilot, and Fred Haise, co-pilot, put the space Enterprise through its paces during the 60-minute flight. "We had a good flight today," former astronaut Donald "Deke" Slayton, said. A couple of minor problems developed during the flight, but Slayton said they were not serious enough to postpone the scheduled free flight in August.

Sniffer dog hunts flood dead

Authorities in Johnstown, Pa. brought in a specially trained dog Tuesday to search for the bodies of about 100 persons still reported missing, as the death toll from the Johnstown flood continued to rise. State Police reported the recovery of the bodies of two girls which were found in nearby Tanneryville, one of the hardest hit sections of the city. The toll rose to 62, with 14 of those still unidentified. The Red Cross and the Salvation Army distributed tons of food and clothing to about 2,000 homeless persons still in emergency centers set up to care for survivors of last week's deluge. Robert Costello, a spokesman for the State of Pennsylvania said the special dog is trained to sniff out bodies in debris.

1.2 million killed in Cambodia?

Up to 1.2 million persons may have been killed under the Communist regime in Cambodia, a high State Department official said in Washington Tuesday and he held out little hope the United States could do anything about it. Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asian affairs, testified before a House international relations subcommittee examining the status of human rights in Cambodia and Vietnam. Later the panel approved a resoluton which condemend large scale killings in Cambodia and called on President Carter to seek to rally international support to bring repressive measures to an end.

Seabrook atom plant gets go-ahead

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, responding to a go-ahead from the government's chief environmental official, Tuesday lifted its ban on construction at the controversial Seabrook, N.H., atomic power plant. The ruling by the NRC's Atomic Safety Licensing and Appeal Board cleared the way for work to start anew on the $2 billion plant. Environmental activisits who have turned Seabrook into a national symbol of opposition to nuclear power said they may picket the construction site but plan no immediate new demonstration on the scale of the May sit-in in which 1,414 protestors were arrested.

Killer typhoon hits Taiwan

A typhoon packing record winds that changed course without warning cut a swath of destruction through the southern quarter of Taiwan and killed at least 28 people, officials in Taipei said Tuesday. Officials said the islandwide death toll was 28 persons. Reports from Kaohsiung said over 3,200 persons were injured by flying objects and pieces of broken glass. More than 150 steel towers carrying high-tension electrical lines were toppled. Officials said power would be out for a week and estimated the damage at "hundreds of millions of dollars." Official sources said the ultimate damage toll to the power sysstem, thousands of factories forced to sit idle and 5,000 people who lost their homes to Typhoon Thelma could reach $1 billion — the worst havoc in Taiwan since World War II.

Common Market OKs Africa policy

The European Common Market Tuesday agreed on a joint anti-apartheid policy, including a possible economic boycott and arms embargo, against South Africa. However, Common Market delegates for the eighth time failed to reach a decision on a project to develop a new and potentially limitless source of energy. The Market foreign ministers refused to disclose details of the joint position against apartheid, which will be presented at a U.N.-sponsored antiapartheid conference in Lagos, Nigeria Aug. 22-26. "Why the heck should we leak our position in advance?" British Foreign Secretary David Owen asked. "You won't get it from me." Conference sources said the joint position synthesizes the various views against apartheid adopted on various occasions by the nine Common Market members.

by Ed Landwehr

Many folks ask us at Landwehr's TV & Appliance Center about home fire alarms. One customer remarked that she has seen so many ads on TV and in the newspapers that she's afraid to go to bed at night.

There are two types available, the heat and the smoke detectors. The heat type senses the temperature of the air and the rate it increases. Smoke detectors sense the presence of smoke particles; particularly smouldering fires in the early stages. I suppose the average home could use at least two, one in the basement and one at some key point on each floor.

We squeeze the thought in here that we don't service detectors. They very seldom need service. But we do specialize in television maintenance. Phone 255-0700 next time. Even if it's just another question.

And if the question of buying a TV set comes up, look in at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights. We have some fine nationally-advertised TVs on the floor.

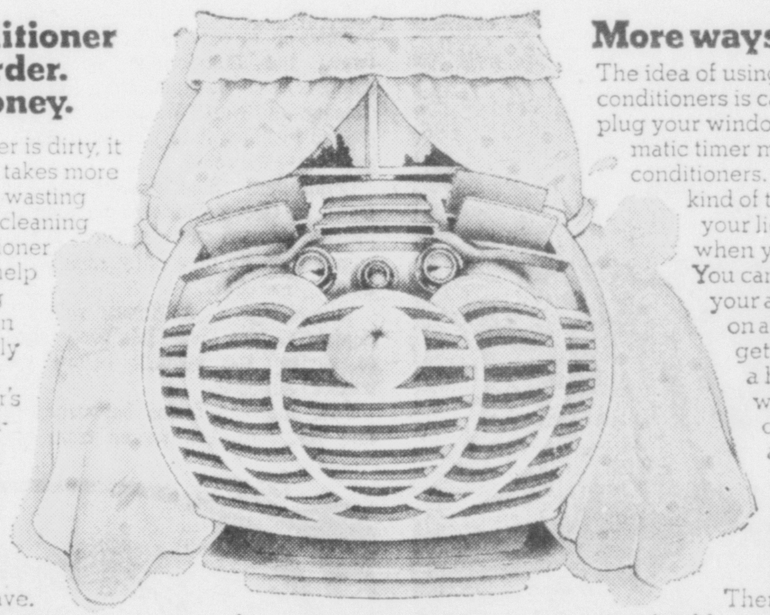
Clean your air conditioner and save some money.

A dirty air conditioner has to work harder. That wastes money.

When your air conditioner is dirty, it has to work harder. That takes more energy. And you end up wasting money. A good periodic cleaning will make your air conditioner more efficient, and will help you save on its operating costs. It's possible to clean most window units in only about 10 minutes. You should check your owner's manual for specific cleaning and maintenance instructions, but in most cases the steps to follow in cleaning are very simple. And the more thoroughly you clean, the more money you'll save.



Vacuum the filter and save a little.

First pull the plug. Then take off the front panel, and carefully remove the filter. You can vacuum it while it's still in place, but it's easier to clean the filter well if you remove it first.

Wash the filter and save a little more.

Your owner's manual will tell you whether the filter in your air conditioner is the kind that can be washed and reused. If it is, you can get the filter even cleaner by first vacuuming it, and then hand washing it in warm water and a gentle detergent. The type of soap recommended for washing woolens is best suited to this job.

Save on central air.

If you've got central air conditioning in your home, there are several steps you can take to keep your central air system running efficiently. Remember to clean or replace your furnace filters regularly. Clear away any debris from around the outdoor unit. And keep grass and shrubs trimmed back to 12 inches away from any working parts.

A call for help may help you save.

If you've had your air conditioner for several years and have never cleaned it before, it could take a qualified serviceman to perform the kind of maintenance and repairs that may be necessary. In an older unit the condenser coil, refrigerant charge, and motor parts may need expert attention.

More ways to save.

The idea of using timers on air conditioners is catching on. You can plug your window unit into an automatic timer made especially for air conditioners. It works just like the kind of timer you'd use to turn your lights on automatically when you're away from home. You can set the timer so that your air conditioner comes on an hour or so before you get home from work on a hot summer day. That way your house will be comfortable when you arrive, but you'll be using less electricity. And your air conditioner won't be running all day long.

There's one last thing you should remember about air conditioners, especially if you're thinking about buying a new one. Air conditioner efficiency varies from model to model, depending on what we call the Energy Efficiency Ratio, or EER. The higher the EER, the more cooling you get for your electric dollar, year after year. It's easy to figure out the EER. Attached to every air conditioner is a metal plate showing that machine's watts and BTU's. To get the EER, just divide the watts into the BTU's. We recommend an EER of 8 or more.

The more efficiently you use energy, the less energy you waste, and the more money you save. And an efficient air conditioner can save you plenty.

U.S. holds key to peace in Mideast, Hussein says

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — King Hussein of Jordan says the United States holds the key to peace in the Middle East and that "the stand of President Carter has been encouraging."

However, Hussein, whose occupied West Bank could become the new Palestine if the Arabs have their way, also fears Carter may not be able to stand up to Jewish political pressure in the United States to achieve that peace.

Hussein, celebrating his silver jubilee on the Hashemite throne, also warned in an interview that the failure of any new Geneva Middle East peace conference could bring "disastrous results," ending in "inevitable" war which would endanger world peace and with radical Arabs replacing moderates.

The King also recognized the Palestine Liberation Organization, which he ousted from Jordan in the Black September civil war in 1970, as the representative of the Palestinians, but cautioned any agreement on the West Bank would depend on the residents of the occupied territory.

"THE COURAGEOUS stand of President Carter until now has been very encouraging," Hussein said in reference to Carter's call for a "Palestinian homeland" as part of any Middle East settlement.

However, he said, "I can see no solution without the return of the West Bank and Gaza, the Arab territories and Palestinian territories and Palestinian territories occupied in 1967, and recognition of the rights of the Palestinians — their right to self-determination, to indicate their opinion regarding their future, regarding a link with Jordan, regarding their leadership — rights they have been denied throughout the many tragic years that have passed."

Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin, in his White House talks with Carter last week, indicated a willingness to pull out of the Sinai Peninsula and Golan Heights, at least in part, but not the West Bank or Gaza. Moreover, Begin has ruled out an independent Palestine or a Palestinian state tied to Jordan.

"If (Israel) has no inclination to withdraw from the occupied Palestinian territory," Hussein said, "then I believe we are facing a serious crisis."

Concerning the prospects for peace talks this fall, Hussein said, "Geneva seems to be the target. But I feel that without adequate preparation and a lot of groundwork above all by the United States, the results might be disastrous."

"IF PEACE MOVES fail, not only is war inevitable, but I believe prior to that upheavals in the entire area are likely to occur and the effects might be far-reaching in terms of the danger to world peace," Hussein said.

Commenting on Sec. of State Cyrus Vance's trip to the Middle East early next month, Hussein said, "I'm hoping that what will evolve is a position or at least a framework which would be adoped by the United States."

"I don't know what he (Vance) will bring but I think there is a strong chance our friends in Washington have an idea with regard to the future following contacts with all concerned in the area."

Asked if he thought the Arabs would turn to the Soviet Union in the event that U.S.-sponsored peace efforts failed, he said:

"I don't think of necessity this would happen but a more radical wave would overrun this area if there was no progress toward a just and durable peace.

"THE PENDULUM would begin to swing the other way. Those who appear to be — and genuinely are — concerned that moderation, reason and logic should prevail would find difficulties in pursuing their policies if these policies prove fruitless in terms of results."

Asked if he thought the radical trend would extend to the oil nations of the Persian Gulf as well, Hussein said, "I think the danger is immense."

Turning to the proposed establishment of a Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza strip and his own relations with the PLO, which were badly strained when he used his army to throw the Palestinians out of Jordan in 1970, Hussein said:

"We can talk to the PLO regarding the future. We have adopted the (1974) Rabat summit resoluton recognizing the PLO as the representative of the Palestinians in any process leading to a solution of the Palestinian problem."

Signs of summer.

THE HERALD editorials

"Our aim: To fear God, tell the truth and make money."
H.C. PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Market forces in housing

For years housing construction in the Chicago area lagged because of high interest rates and other financial difficulties.

The housing market has picked up this summer, pushing construction to the highest levels since 1959. That's the good news. The bad news is that construction is being delayed by material and labor shortages.

The delays are going to cost contractors money and will mean aggravation to home buyers whose new houses will be delayed. However, looking at the present situation gives a clear picture of how the market economy works and provides evidence for optimism on the economy.

The shortages of building materials are the result of increased demand. Pres. Carter's energy proposal includes a tax break for homeowners who insulate their homes. As a result, the rush for insulation has created a shortage.

In addition, the appliance manufacturers are having trouble keeping up with the demand. Sales are up 8.7 per cent over the first six months of last year. The increase had meant delays in refrigerator deliveries until the industry can gear up.

The current shortage of construction workers is also a reflection of the forces of supply and demand. During the three-year construction lag, an estimated 2,000 to 2,500 carpenters found work in other fields. Now that they're needed, they aren't available.

All of these factors are going to cause disruptions for some Northwest suburban residents preparing to move into their "dream house." They will mean delays and inconvenience.

But in a strange way, even the delays are good news. The economy is getting healthier and building is booming. In the long run, that will help us all.

Des Plaines city hall must meet code

People in glass houses . . .

Des Plaines city officials should take that old adage to heart when they cite businesses for code violations.

The city council recently closed down a Des Plaines restaurant because it did not have "panic bars" on its doors. The devices are a fire safety measure which permit people to open doors simply by pushing on a bar.

The bars are considered a must in places which host large numbers of people, and the city required the restaurant owner to comply before allowing him to reopen.

Then it was learned that the city hall — where these kinds of orders emanate — doesn't have the panic bars either, and other violations of city code may exist there. It seems city hall was never given a thorough once over by the building department.

Chagrined by this state of affairs, city officials said they will correct the problems quickly.

But that does not change the fact that city officials were remiss in not practicing what they preach.

Des Plaines should go beyond correcting the problems at city hall. It ought to find out why problems like these occur and take steps to ensure that the errors are not repeated.

Cooperative progress

Palatine and Rolling Meadows officials are finally talking to each other, and that's progress.

For years communications between the two municipalities in Palatine Township have been non-existent with officials at times being outright hostile toward one another.

Proposals that leaders of the two communities discuss the shape of the boundaries between them were ignored for years as officials carried on their feud.

This served no one except the developers, who were able to play the two towns off against one another to get what they wanted in zoning cases.

While nothing of significance came out of a luncheon meeting last week between Palatine Village Pres. Robert Guss and Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer, it's a healthy sign that at least the two are talking.

We hope this meeting will be followed up by others and evolve into a good working relationship between the two towns. A boundary agreement is a top priority, but there are also other areas where it would be beneficial for the municipalities to work together. Continued animosity will do no good for anyone.

"Sometimes I wish we'd never SEEN 'MacArthur'!"

Progress creates the fire of Biblical destruction

Jim Bishop

It is possible that man's greatest enemy is progress. Unless it can be stabilized and managed, all of us are on a runaway planet. There is evidence in the world of science that we are so brilliantly innovative that we have lost control.

There were wagons and horses in Mesopotamia 50 centuries ago. Man still depended on wagons and horses 90 years ago. Progress was minuscule.

The kerosene lamp was considered a great leap forward from the guttering candle.

But, in 90 years, we have devised missiles which can travel to other planets at 25,000 miles per hour, take photos and send them back across space. We have instantaneous news from television, microwave telephones which transmit our voices to stationary listening devices in the sky, and relay the sound to someone at a phone in another continent.

MAN ALWAYS spoke of "modern times." He was referring to his time. My father's time was water drawn from wells, horses, homemade soap, trolley cars, much illness and few remedies, and lots of ignorance.

The greatest advance of all — and the one which sets us apart from all other animals — was the invention of the printed word. Knowledge was passed on from generation to generation easily, and with some fascination.

Ninety years ago, a bumper crop of corn or beans was dangerous because no one had discovered how to freeze it. The great minds of medicine were practically all alive in the past 90 years. The chemistry of antibiotics, vaccines, preventive medicine and cure is an accepted miracle.

A horse may travel 15 miles in a day. A fighter plane can traverse that distance in one minute. Radar sees. Sonar listens. X-ray sees. Electrocardiogram listens. We see and hear that which we are unable to see and hear.

A FOSSILIZED cockroach dead 250 million years, can be examined by an entomologist and he will not detect any difference from the cockroach of today. A turtle today has precisely the same instincts, the same fears, as his ancestors of antiquity. He has an instinct to fight for survival, but he does not understand death.

A half century ago, Sir Julian Huxley worried about man's cumulative progress. The British scientist feared that in the 20th century progress was no longer stately, but rather geometric. The further we jumped ahead with inventions and devices, the further we jumped the next morning.

In World War I, it cost $50,000 to kill a man. Today we can kill a million men at a dollar apiece. Nations edge toward better bankruptcy spending more and more on deadly devices which everyone concedes can never be used.

They fear each other. They dare not stop. Alliances are made among those who do not trust each other. The strong bluff to the ragged edge of war, and pull back. The hydrogen atom, which brings warmth from the sun, is the new pagan god.

THE POOREST of our laborers earns more in a day than the men of some nations make in a year. The government pays the lazy, the workers pay the government. Economic experts play with the economy, but no one has ever mastered the subject.

When we touch something, we hurt something else. Nothing, no one, stands alone. As we make further quantum leaps, we may become a world of intellectual beggars. We will know everything, but can do nothing.

Greatness is sometimes tinged with annihilation. Rome was great, and Rome perished. And before her, Athens. And before that, Babylonia. Each had a "moderntime." Each one assured the world that perfection had been attained at last.

AREN'T WE in the same position? Who can deny that America is great and noble and generous? Is this the orange glow of twilight? Why are we buying more goods than we are selling? Who dares to spit on the American dollar?

I am no prophet of doom. I'm a devoted observer of men and events. We move too far too fast. One scientist at M.I.T. looked back over the road and said, "I think we began to lose control in 1920." I don't know why he said it. I can't guess what devices he had in mind.

What I do know is that man's aspirations all along, the use of his inventive genius, was to live a peaceable easy life. Nothing more. The Bible says that the earth shall be destroyed by fire. If so, we invented the machinery for it.

If one thought of the 1960's as the decade of "revolution" and the New Left, one can analogously characterize the 1970's as the decade of "reaction" and the New Right. As evidence for this claim, I offer the resurgence of such organizations as the American Nazi Party and the Ku Klux Klan, the anti-abortion movement and its recent legal victories, and the decision of the Rolling Meadows city council to pass an obscenity ordinance. Our local Anita Bryant (Alderperson Lorraine Godawa) has apparently succeeded in her (too) much publicized attempt to rid the city of pornography. Her political gain (which probably amounts only to political exposure) is an ethical, political, and social loss to the residents of the community as a whole.

My quarrel with the ordinance is essentially two-fold. First, I am concerned with the dangers of censorship in a purportedly free society. The issue of censorship touches on some very fundamental questions in the area of ethical and political philosophy, particularly tht question of rights (i.e., the conflict between individual rights and the "public interest"). Secondly, there is a more immediate, practical issue at stake here. To put it briefly, there are more important, more serious community-wide problems with which our local legislators should be concerned. After making some general remarks, I would like to deal with each of these in turn.

To begin with, I think the issue of pornography is really a pseudo-issue (i.e., it's not really an issue worth considering at all). However, censorship of any form in a society claiming to guarantee freedom of speech, freedom of the press, etc. is a danger to all individuals in that society. My motivation here is not one of supporting pornography but rather is one simply of challenging those who consider pornography to be, in some way, "criminal" and/or "immoral." It's hard for me to see how an event such as the viewing of pornography could be construed as falling under either of the two aforementioned categories, since no property or human ife is physically damaged and since there is no loss of human life. I also fear the spread of censorship to the local bookstores, the public library, and perhaps my own bookcase, and this uneasiness is not allayed by section C (p.4) of the ordinance which states that the public library and "accredited educational institutions" will not fall under the jurisdiction of the ordinance.

One must distinguish between the result of an action (be it an individual or a collective action) and the intention or purpose for which the action under consideration was performed. The result, in this case, was an obscenity ordinance. The intention, as far as I can surmise, was to rid the Meadows Theater of X-rated movies, films which apparently offended the individual moralities of the city council members. The wording of the ordinance contains such objective and uncontroversial phrases as 'the public health and welfare of the community,' 'the wholesome family atmosphere which the Council is anxious to maintain' (p.1); 'average person,' 'prurient interest,' 'customary limits of candor,' 'normal or perverted,' 'patently offensive' (p.2); and 'ordinary adults' (p.3). In addition, there is a proposition on the second page which reads as follows: "The work, taken as a whole, must lack serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value; and must be utterly without redeeming social value." What are the precise criteria for separating the 'whole' from the 'part' and what are the precise conditions for the application of 'utterly' to the phrase on the social worth of the object in question? What all of this amounts to is that through some mystical moral intuition (the ability to perceive The Good), the legislator's sense of morality dictates community vaues with respect to literature, politics, science, and the arts. Questions of aesthetic taste and social worth are left to a group of moral "do-gooders" who take vehement stands on issues which are politically safe (in terms of their own careers) and politically worthless (in terms of the community taken as a whole).

I would be less disturbed by the ordinance if the intention of the authors exemplified a community-wide concern. For example, in the specific case of X-rated movies, one may claim that they are produced and distributed by organized crime. If community groups are concerned with the activities of organized crime, this would lead to a more plausible social reason for banning X-rated movies: to deprive organized crime of a market for their commodity (pornography). Also, one may attack X-rated movies on the grounds that they dehumanize and degrade women (i.e., that they are sexist, being made by men for the pleasure of men).

In short, my argument is that there are specific questions which can be raised with respect to different kinds of pornographic commodities. The city council has ignored this specificty in addition to making subjective ethical pronouncements which show no evidence of reflecting the interests of the community at large.

Perhaps the people governing this community should be concerned with the fact that their high schools are a disaster, that the city is undergoing a serious water crisis, and that vandalism to public and private property is greater than the local press would lead us to believe.

Instead of the current moral "do-goodism," we ought to address ourselves to more pressing issues which affect all members of the community and make a serious, conscious attempt to solve them.

They defend our band coverage

"I have read two letters concerning the Conant High Band. I do not feel anyone should feel slighted because of lack of publicity in The Herald.

Where was our wonderful band, we hear, when we needed them the most? On the 4th of July they paraded other places. How could The Herald photograph a band that did not exist in our village? Our parade attendance could not cheer them either.

I feel this so-called championship band belonged here in Hoffman Estates to prove to us, not everyone else, how good they are.

E. C. Fosdick
Hoffman Estates

I'M WRITING in regard to a recently published article by Curtis O. Pierce, a member of the Conant Marching Band. Sorry, Mr. Pierce, but I disagree with your statement that The Herald does not cover enough of Conant Band's activities. The fact is that there are so many prestigious bands in the area that The Herald would have to have a complete 'band' section to cover their activities. It seems to me that your letter was submitted only as a means for boasting about your band's accomplishments. Certainly, you are to be congratulated, but I am of the opinion that you are doing a pretty good job of that yourself. (Your comments sound like a commercial for 'Conant Cougar Marching Band'). Aren't you the one who should wake up to the fact that The Herald is in a position that prohibits it from playing favorites?

Carter aims at solvency in economics

by JOSEPH C. HARSCH

President Carter's remarks at his latest press conference on the subject of abortion are so controversial that most subsequent discussion has centered upon his reluctance to allow federal funds to be used for abortions for the poor. Little if any attention has been paid to the context within which he arrived at this stand.

That context strikes me as being of first importance as a milestone in the evolution of American political philosophy.

Carter certainly is the first president since Herbert Hoover who could conceivably have said the following:

" . . . THERE ARE MANY things in life that are not fair, that wealthy people can afford and poor people can't. But I don't believe that the federal government should take action to try to make these opportunities exactly equal, particularly when there is a moral factor involved."

Probably most American presidents from George Washington through Herbert Hoover would have agreed at least privately. Some would have put it in stronger terms. The American dream usually has centered on the concept of equality of opportunity, but seldom on equalizing the differences between rich and poor.

But American politics for the last half century has swirled around plans and proposals for giving the poor even more of the advantages that wealth can purchase.

The Carter wording quoted above is fuzzy. It almost sounds as though he were saying that it is moral for the rich, but not for poor, to have abortions, which I am sure was not his intention. But if the passage means anything at all it certainly means that Carter has taken a remarkably forthright stand for the capitalist system as opposed to the Marxist system.

THE ESSENCE OF Marxism is equalization of the human condition. The theory of it is that it is right and proper to take from those able to produce and give equally to all, regardless of their performance. The familiar phrase is "from each according to his ability, to each according to his need." In the pure Marxist society there would be little or no advantage from wealth. The results of the labor of the producers would be distributed equally around the community.

The capitalist concept is exactly opposite. Wealth is the carrot that those of superior ability or industry accumulate. The enjoyment of that wealth fuels the economy of the community. Without inequality between rich and poor there would be no incentive for the poor to strive to improve their condition. Therefore wealth should be encouraged by the state, not penalized or discouraged.

There are not many people around any longer who would speak up for ruthless capitalism. In the modern vernacular capitalism must at least be humane; that is, it must be tempered to protect the poor and the unfortunate from physical suffering. Every person must be provided at least with minimum housing, clothing, food, and health care.

IT IS INTERESTING that as capitalism has been tempered by humaneness, there has also been a growing demand in the Marxist countries for "humane socialism" as opposed to the kind practiced in the Soviet Union. By making both capitalism and socialism more humane the gap between them may be narrowed. Yet there is still a deep chasm between the concept of equalizing opportunity, which is compatible with capitalism, and equalizing the result, which is the essence of Marxism.

Carter accepts unfairness as part of the human condition. The Marxist philosopher would argue for the elimination of all unfairness. Carter believes it is right and proper that wealth should enjoy advantages. The Marxist philosopher is horrified by the enjoyments of the rich.

Carter rejects the idea of the central government interfering to eliminate inequality. The Marxist philosopher would use government to achieve and consolidate equality.

The question in American politics for a long time has been whether the American system would stop at humane capitalism, or cross the boundary line of that concept and push toward ever more equalization of the human condition. What would then develop in the United States might be closer to Karl Marx's utopia than anything yet existing in any communist country.

IT WOULD SEEM that Carter reflects in his attitudes and in his words a hard turning away from that direction. He is not troubled by a difference between things available to the rich and things available to the poor. The main direction of his effort is toward the economic solvency of the community, not toward equality. He preaches reform of the welfare system, not extension of the system. He wants to check inflation even if in the process there is some rise in unemployment.

We have yet to find out how far Carter would like to go in a direction which could be called revival of the capitalist system. We do not know how much unemployment he could survive and retain leadership in Washington. But he certainly speaks in a tongue not heard along the Potomac for many a long year.

Panel's efforts prove substantial

Steve Brown

From our Springfield bureau

Students of state government will be pleased to know that a report coming out Thursday shows 86 per cent of the recommendations made by the Commission on the Organization of the Illinois General Assembly 10 years ago have been enacted.

While this revelation is not expected to be heralded by the tolling of church bells throughout the state, it is an event to be noted.

While reaching for confetti and noisemakers, here are a few thoughts to ponder.

FIRST, IT IS always refreshing to have a state legislative commission report back on what it has done to and/or for the people. It also is unusual to see some recommendations being followed.

Too often commissions submit reports and then hurtle into oblivion, never to be heard from again. More often this process costs thousands of dollars.

However, COOGA — whose acronym might be mistaken for a Mediterranean dance or an Amazonian reptile — has not run up a lot of big bills. In fact, State Rep. Harold B. Katz, D-Glencoe, the godfather of all modern efforts to reform the legislature, reports the panel has $5,043 in the bank.

COOGA's labor has been the largely thankless task of developing new rules and procedures for the legislature, a normally unruly creature that operates in near chaos.

SOME OF THE recommendations adopted have been beneficial. Legislative committees no longer can play hide and seek with their meetings. The proxy voting system, which allowed the committee chairmen or power brokers to control action totally, has been mothballed. Efforts also have been made to improve the record keeping process so most information on legislative action is more accessible to the public and the news media.

COOGA's recommendations have made the operation of the legislature more orderly and open, a goal more branches of government should try to attain.

But the report is incomplete. A footnote on costs is needed on the document being released by Katz.

Spending for the operation of the legislature has risen at a faster level than other aspects of state government. While comparisons are difficult because of efforts to "streamline" the state's bookkeeping system, it appears the cost of the legislature has tripled in the past decade while spending for the rest of state government "only" has doubled.

A SEARCH OF dusty decade-documents shows legislative operations for a two-year period ran about $6.1 million, while today's tab exceeds $22 million for 24 months. Neither figure includes salaries — currently $20,000 for each of the 236 members.

The over-all state budget has increased from a mere $5 billion to $10 billion during the same period.

So while enactment of the recommendations have been beneficial, the changes were not cheap.

Thanks to the implementation of the COOGA recommendation those procedural changes are accompanied by expanded secretarial help both here and in Chicago, $17,000 per year for office expenses back home for the Springfield 236, toll free telephone service and the $36 per day expense allowance to cover rooms and meals for the lawmakers when they are working in the capital.

It also should be noted not only the legislature benefited from the COOGA recommendations. This epistle is written from the "posh" press room suggested by the panel. The capital press corps moved last year into rent free refurbished quarters that cost an estimated $830,000 to remodel.

COOGA did not suggest spending that much, either on the press or themselves, but the situation stands as additional testimony that government costs more.

Mob power struggle cited in Annerino murder

From Herald news services

The shooting death of reputed crime syndicate figure Samuel J. Annerino was probably part of a power struggle within the Chicago mob for control of the stolen auto parts business, authorities said Tuesday.

It was the third crime syndicate-type killing involving six deaths in the Chicago area in four days.

Annerino, 35, who apparently had been trying to muscle in on crime syndicate garages where stolen autos are dismantled for parts, was gunned down as he sat in his car in suburban Oak Lawn Monday, police said.

HE WAS BEING sought for questioning in the execution-style killing of four businessmen in an elevator in Park Ridge last Thursday.

Safe deposit boxes that investigators hope will yield new clues in the cases may be opened today under court order.

Joseph Moffitt, Park Ridge Director of public safety, said safe deposit keys believed to belong to the victims are of a type used at four area banks.

Police were seeking Cook County grand jury subpoenas and court orders Tuesday to allow them to open the bank boxes.

Moffitt said police received an anonymous telephone call identifying a Palatine bank where one of the victims allegedly had a safe deposit box. But Moffitt said he could not confirm the accuracy of that tip.

"Due to the (federal) privacy act, the banks are well within legal grounds not issuing any information right now," he said.

If the necessary court orders can be obtained, the safe deposit boxes could be opened sometime today, he said.

THE OAK LAWN assassination of Annerino was carried out by two men wearing red ski masks and riding in a red car. Annerino had walked out of a furniture store and stepped into his $19,000 Mercedes-Benz when he was cut down.

"The passenger, who had the shotgun, fired one shot through the driver's side of the car," said Oak Lawn police Capt. Harry Munch. "He fell to the right (passenger) side of his auto and attempted to crawl out (of the car) and he fired again.

"He started running (for the store) and the guy with the shotgun got out of the car and fired again," Munch said. "He made it up to the door. He collapsed in the vestibule.

"We found five spent cartridges, maybe three times he was hit," Munch said. Annerino was pronounced dead on arrival at Christ Hospital in Oak Lawn.

ANNERINO, SENT to prison for one year in 1974 for a juice loan conviction, also was attacked last October. He was shot in the right hand and slightly wounded in the head in that attack.

Links also were being explored between Annerino and the shooting death of former Chicago police commander Mark C. Thanasouras last Friday.

Sgt. Jerry Adams, of the Chicago Police Dept.'s organized crime unit, said it is not known whether Annerino's death was related to the others, but said it could be connected with a power struggle between two factions of the mob.

STEPHEN SCHILLER, head of the Chicago Crime Commission, said, "I see it connected with . . . killings in the stolen auto parts business. Right now there's a lot of competition over the stolen auto parts business. It could be factions within the outfit.

Peter Vaira, chief of the Justice Dept.'s organized crime strike force, said "that's a pretty vicious faction that runs that auto parts thing down there on the south — in the Calumet City area.

"There has been fights for years over leadership of that thing," he said. "These guys are always feuding — there's always somebody getting blown away. It's a very lucrative racket."

MEANWHILE, POLICE continue to search for new leads in the multiple slaying of Joseph T. LaRose, 35, Inverness; his brother-in-law, John Vische, 32, Country Club Hills; Donald Marchbanks, 53, Palos Heights; and Malcolm I. Russell, 35, Chicago.

All of the victims were involved in a smoke detector and burglar alarm sales firm, U.S. Universal Inc., that authorities say was a pyramid franchise operation set up to swindle investors.

At least two of the victims, LaRose of Inverness and Russell of Chicago, were involved in a similar sales fraud scheme that was the target of a 1974 lawsuit by Atty. Gen. William J. Scott against Holiday Magic Cosmetics.

Services for LaRose will be at 10 a.m. today at the Ahlgrim and Sons Funeral Home, Palatine, and a 10:30 a.m. Mass will be said at St. Theresa Church. LaRose will be buried in Evergreen Park.

Tharp walks tightrope of artistic touch

BY LYNN ASINOF

Twyla Tharp is a dance pioneer who came along when all of the dance frontiers seemed to have been conquered.

That was back in the mid-1960s and her little troupe has been setting the dance world on its ear ever since. By the time Chicago got its first look at Tharp's company Sunday, it already was an institution.

Mid-week review

So it goes with talent. That which is good is quickly accepted. The eye adjusts, other companies imitate and the newness wears off.

SOME SAY THE edge now is gone, but the painfully short, two-day visit at Ravinia this week showed Tharp's company still is a breath of fresh air.

Tharp walks a tightrope between the artistic and the absurd, and the result is exhilarating. Everything happens fast and nothing repeats itself.

She mixes classical ballet with hip-wrenching bump and grind. Her dancers twitch and slouch. They dance doubletime and in slow motion.

At first, Tharp's choreography leaves you trying just to hang on. But the more you watch, the more it makes sense and the more exciting her choreographed chaos becomes.

The long-sold-out Ravinia visit is part of a new plan for Tharp's company. In the past Tharp has turned her back on touring and repertory. She kept her company small — only five dancers — and never looked back on the old works.

TODAY THERE ARE 11 dancers, not including Tharp, and there is a repertory. Tharp is not touring with her company, but staying home in New York with her son.

The Sunday performance showed three sides of the multifaceted Tharp phenomenon. "Fugue," a 1970 piece danced in silence on a miked stage, was the most complex. An intellectual exercise of timing and movement, the piece is made of 20 canons of 20-second phrases, where the rhythms are set by heel tapping, thigh slapping and hand clapping.

"Eight Jelly Rolls" showed what Tharp does with good old American blues. Set to music by Jelly Roll Morton, the piece spoofs the jazz age. Female dancers dressed in backless tuxedos hint of old-time chorus lines, silent movies, slick musicians and their back-up groups.

Shelly Washington cut a Chaplinesque figure premiering in Tharp's own solo role. Wide-eyed and empty-headed she skittered around the stage, each part of her body taking on a life of its own. As a falling-down drunk in the next scene, she wove herself through the continually moving line of dancers before plastering herself to the floor.

THARP HAS A marvelous touch with such rousing music, but her humor is most devasting when it turns to the classical idiom. There the movement becomes subtler, as in "Mud," a 1977 spoof of classical ballet.

Women dressed in gauzy white dance on point, occasionally teetering off balance. Their lyrical performance is interrupted by a raucous assemblage of dancers in underwear-like costumes who push, shove and slouch through a brief moment of chaos.

A solo by Richard Colton provides a superb moment of understatement as he dances a Tharpian version of the romantic classical prince. With languorous stretch in his limbs, he poses and preens with movements that flow through his body in convoluted patterns.

The quality of Tharp's troupe is uneven. Colton and the gamine Christine Uchida have the steely technical base lacking in many of the other dancers. Some of the newer Tharp dancers have not learned their vocabulary, leaving their slouches without substance.

No one knows what next year will bring for Tharp's growing troupe. No decisions have been made. That is the way Tharp likes it.

Hopefully it will bring the company back to Ravinia.

'Creation' has Ravinia crowd cheering

by BILL GOWEN

Haydn's "The Creation" provided a most appropriate closing to James Levine's annual one-month stay at the Ravinia Festival Sunday.

When the pavilion and lawns were filled to capacity the week before to hear Beethoven's Ninth Symphony it was a case of the masses going to see and hear a familiar work.

The less-than-capacity house Sunday to hear the 1797 oratorio of the first six days of God's work made more noise and shouts of approval than the Beethoven followers at the other concert. "The Creation" was for music-lovers, pure and simple, even though the number who had heard this music previously performed live was small.

Mid-week review

THIS WAS the Ravinia premiere of "The Creation." It was last performed at Orchestra Hall eight years ago. The most likely place to have heard the work was at a church performance, and this was no "church performance."

Levine kept a brisk pace throughout but instead of having that "rushed" feeling, the music had the sense of depth and openness that made the two hours pass quickly. The size of the orchestra was somewhat reduced but still larger than that of Haydn's day.

The work of the five soloists was exemplary throughout, with soprano, Benita Valente (Gabriel), and tenor, Seth McCoy (Uriel), carrying most ot the narrative in the first two sections, which cover the first five days of the creation of the world.

The third part of the oratorio is a proclamation in praise of the Creation with a duet between Adam and Eve, sung by bass, Arnold Voketaitis, and soprano, Kathleen Battle, respectively. McCoy returns to provide additional narrative, declaring happiness evermore for the earth's first human inhabitants.

ORATORIOS PROVIDE an excellent showpiece for Margaret Hillis' Chicago Symphony Chorus, and this was no exception. The 150 voices provided the perfect sonic framework for some of music's finest choral showpieces. At the conclusion of the famous hymn of praise, "The Heavens are telling the glory of God," the audience burst into applause although there was no intermission scheduled at that point.

The concluding chorus, "Sing the Lord, all ye voices," used solo voices from the chorus and brought shouts of approval from the audience at the final "Amen." The work was sung in the original German with English translation provided in a 10-page booklet.

Levine now heads to the Salzburg Festival to work with the Mozart operatic repertory. One thing from Ravinia he won't miss will be the trains, as another case was made Sunday for a need for improved noise control at the park. As Thomas was beginning his narrative opening the third section a particularly loud diesel groaned past on its northward course.

Thomas smiled bravely and carried on, barely heard by the audience. Levine, having stopped the performance at the opening-night concert four weeks ago, his time kept the show going.

But one train could do little to spoil such a superlative performance of a rarely heard work.

Rotation of TV press coverage OK with Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter won't mind if the TV networks decide to rotate live coverage of his news conferences so as to reduce cancellation of soap operas and daytime programs, the White House said Tuesday.

In what seemed like careful diplomatic handling of a ticklish question, deputy press secretary Rex Granum declined a perfect chance to push for continuation of the traditional, all-networks coverage when the issue came up at the White House news briefing.

At the same time, Granum said Carter would have his regular, semiweekly news conference at 9:30 a.m. Thursday when many stations are offering game shows, sitcom reruns and so forth — and said the networks are, as usual, welcome to broadcast it.

A NETWORK reporter asked whether the White House believes all three networks are obliged to offer simultaneous live coverage of such affairs, as they usually have.

The reporter said presidential TV adviser Barry Jagoda has been considering suggesting only one network at a time cover the conferences live, so as to reduce complaints from TV viewers who get upset when the networks cancel soap operas and other popular daytime fare to cover the President.

Carter sometimes holds his conferences at midafternoon, in the midst of soap opera prime time.

"We want to make it abundantly clear we are not requesting that each of the three networks carry it," Granum replied.

"IF IT'S . . . held on a rotating basis, that certainly would be agreeable with us."

Some critics argue that Carter is becoming over-exposed because of his frequent news conferences and other public appearances. None of the commercial networks offered live coverage of his "town meeting" show in Yazoo City, Miss., last Thursday night.

During the 30-minute briefing, Granum also said:

• Carter is "pleased" that a Senate committee found no impropriety involved in the $3.4 million loan Budget Director Bert Lance obtained last January from the First National Bank of Chicago. "Mr. Lance continues to enjoy his full confidence," Granum said.

• The Soviet Union has made no response about Carter's speech on U.S.-Soviet relations in Charleston, S.C., last Thursday.

• Carter interviewed FBI General Counsel John Mintz Tuesday as the sixth nominee for FBI director, but is not certain whether he will interview additional nominees.

The White House also said Carter had sent Congress messages asking deferral of the $11 million for the local public works program of the Commerce Dept. and an increase of $5.6 million in the total deferral of $37.4 million for the Clinch River Breeder reactor project.

Carter wants the Clinch River funding deferred until the future of the project is settled.

Prof sails for 42 days– and all to see the queen

GUERNSEY, Channel Islands (UPI) — A Georgia music professor says the queen's autograph would be reward enough for his solo 42-day voyage across the Atlantic in a 28-foot sloop.

Edward Lormand, 41, said he realizes an audience with Queen Elizabeth II may be out of the question, "But one thing I really want is for her to sign the last page of my log."

He spoke after being reunited with his damaged sloop, Lormand's Second Folly, in Guernsey.

"Everybody's treating me just beautifully," said Lormand, who set off June 11 from Fernandina, Fla. "I've just had a meal fit for a king with the Belgian family on the next boat. Real steak and real salad. I would make the trip again just for these past 24 hours."

LORMAND, A MUSIC professor at DeKalb Community College in Atlanta, said his trip went without incident until Saturday night, when his sloop was blown across the English Channel by a gale and hit a rock off the Isle of Sark.

"It was only a bent rudder stock," he said, "But it made it too dangerous to go in."

On Sunday he attracted the attention of a passing boat, which took him to St. Helier for the night. And on Monday the Isle of Sark Shipping Co. towed his boat to Guernsey, where it was returned to him.

LORMAND SAID his wife Fran booked a flight to England as soon as she heard of his arrival. 'She's a great sailor herself and we're going to work the boat back to American together."

He said his sloop's cargo included a gift of a pottery jar containing 50 Bicentennial dollars for the queen — "one for every state in the Union or two for every year of her reign."

Rickshaw on road of U.S. enterprise

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UPI) — Tom Hatcher's rickshaw is the cheapest transportation around for bargain-hunting shoppers in Kalamazoo's downtown pedestrian mall.

The graduate student charges 15 cents a ride on his oriental-style buggy, which was specially built to serve as a "mobile home" at night.

What inspired the idea?

"It's free enterprise," Hatcher said. "It's American."

He built the rickshaw from bicycle wheels found in garbage, discarded plywood and pine for the frame.

At night it provides him with rather crude sleeping quarters. "All you have to do is pull out the seat and slide it down for a bench," Hatcher said. "My bedding is underneath the seat."

Hatcher, who netted $15 one Saturday when tips were plentiful, has high hopes for the future. "Right now, I'm small," he said. "But everybody starts out small."

'Tut: Boy King' has glint of gold after 3,000 years

NEW YORK (UPI) — ". . . Everywhere the glint of gold."

Those were the words British archaeologist Howard Carter used in describing his entrance into the 3,000-year-old silence of the tomb of Egypt's Pharaoh Tutankhamun in 1922.

His awe will be readily understood by those who tune in to NBC's "Tut: the Boy King," today at 7 p.m. on Channel 5.

The program carefully examines in stunning color the 66 objects from King Tut's tomb that are on loan from the Cairo Museum in a show already seen at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., now on exhibit in Chicago, and scheduled also for New Orleans, Seattle, Los Angeles and New York.

EGYPT'S KING TUT is a bigger hit in death than he was in life. He's the focus of yet another television special, NBC's "Tut: the Boy King" today at 7 p.m. on Channel 5.

ORSON WELLES delivers the commentary, which is long on poetry and facts and necessarily short on historical information since not a great deal is known about Tut's 18th Dynasty reign.

The artifacts themselves are gorgeous — not just in gold, but also in other forms including glass, which was on a par with semiprecious metals in ancient Egypt.

Welles is all very well, but it's difficult not to regret that NBC didn't enlist the Sixth Earl of Carnarvon, son of Howard Carter's patron who sponsored the original dig, to narrate. The show would have been shorter on awe and longer on humor and humanity.

Lord Carnarvon attended an NBC press reception this week and delighted everyone. At 78, age has not withered his wit nor staled his infinite capacity to amuse. He obviously believes the so-called curse of Tutankhamun is so much bat dung (bat dung dust being one of the proposed culprits in the death of pneumonia of some of the invaders of King Tut's tomb).

WHILE HE TELLS with relish the tale of how the lights of Cairo inexplicably went out at his father's death only months after the tomb was opened and how back in England his dog howled on cue, it's all in good fun.

Lord Carnarvon says his father died after a careless barber nicked a mosquito bite, which became infected, led to blood poisoning, pneumonia and death.

On other matters pertaining to the curse, "I keep an open mind," he says, and twinkles.

The technical aspect of the program is almost as fascinating as its content — it was taped at nights, while the display was on view daytimes in Washington, using only one minicam, the equipment carried around on a single teacart.

"People ask if television is an art form," said George A. Heinemann, executive producer of "Tut: the Boy King." "We were doing a television show, doing the thing television does best — we were taking the people to the objects. This is not a documentary. We take people on a tour. We don't go anywhere else, we don't do anything else. It is a television experience."

Report points out S. African bias

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dutch-descended Afrikaner rules South Africa, inspired by the Bible and the gun, and living in fear that his treasured way of life will be overthrown by what he sincerely believes to be inferior people.

When Afrikaner farmer Bushie Meiring tells NBC correspondent Garrick Utley, "The black man is not up to the standard of the white man . . . He cannot be equal in competition with the white man," the outside observer can't make a dent by pointing out the way in which apartheid makes it impossible for a black to succeed.

This is the picture NBC News presents today at 9 p.m. on channel 5 in a special "NBC Reports: Africa's Defiant White Tribe."

LITTLE THAT the viewer sees in the show is really new — South Africa for some reason is a popular subject for documentaries. But repetition does help pound home the point that the minority white population of South Africa holds a privileged position, believes it deserves it, and intends to retain it.

What makes the repetition valuable is that Americans, with their own brand of racial conscience, may practice discrimination but seldom preach it. Equality for all remains essential to the American dream. For the Afrikaner, the white man is superior to the man of color, particularly the black.

The frightening aspect of South Africa's situtation is the potential for violence. Gatsha Buthelezi, chief minister of the Zulus, the largest tribe in South Africa, spoke out at a political affair, pointing his remarks toward a South African cabinet minister who was presiding:

"If the present political lunacy of hard-liners within your regime triumphs, as seems to be the case, we black and white South Africans may at this very moment be poised for a holocaust whose dimensions have not yet been witnessed by the world within living memory."

THE AFRIKANER way now, as presented by Utley, is to offer tribes "homelands," which sounds better on paper than in fact because the blacks take title to undeveloped land in countries that are small, fragmented and dependent on South Africa. That means the tribespeople still must work in South Africa, but as foreign laborers posing little threat to Afrikaner power.

Utley sums up the show by saying:

"It is sad to note that one thing blacks and whites can agree upon is that South Africa's race problem probably will not be solved peaceably. Many blacks and whites have told us they are prepared to die for their cause. Many may have to."

NBC NEWS CORRESPONDENT Garrick Utley talks with South African troops in the combat zone along the border of Southwest Africa and Angola in "NBC Reports: Africa's Defiant White Tribe" today at 9 p.m. on Channel 5.

What seniors should know about drugs

by BARBARA LADD

Elizabeth Langerhausen, Des Plaines, sat in the middle of a room of senior citizens. A few feet away a woman fumbled with several empty containers of medicines. Behind Mrs. Langerhausen a man read the day's schedule for "What you should know about the medicine you take."

"It's been a long time since I've sat in a classroom," she said, shifting uncomfortably. "But it's an important topic. I myself don't take many medicines. Just these."

She pulled a scrap of paper from her purse with five drugs neatly printed on it.

"But my brother-in-law, now he takes 27 pills a day. Twenty-seven! Imagine!"

Mrs. Langerhausen is 68 years old. She and about 75 other elderly persons were attending a drug abuse workshop in Morton Grove, co-sponsored by Oakton Community College, the Illinois Department on Aging and Suburban Cook County Area Agency on Aging.

Drug abuse, in this case, centered on medications commonly taken by older persons. Leaders were Betsy Epstein, a registered nurse and educator with Augustana Hospital's Senior Health Program in Chicago, and Ronald Gaetano, pharmacist and executive director of Broome Co. Drug Awareness Center in Johnston City, N.Y. He also is co-author of "The Elderly: Their Health and the Drugs in Their Lives" (Kendall-Hunt 1976).

BOTH BEMOAN THE lack of drug information and rampant misuse of medications by the elderly.

"About 95 per cent of the senior citizens are ambulatory and in varying degrees responsible for their own lives, including administering their drugs," said Gaetano. "But we don't tell them anything about it — what the drug is for, when and how to take it, what side effects to look for. How stupid we've been. . ."

He cited 1962 research (the latest on the topic) which concluded that nearly 60 per cent of elderly, chronically ill ambulatory patients studied committed one or more errors in self-medication. Nearly half of those mistakes were potentially serious ones.

One case was that of an elderly man who was diagnosed by his doctor as having a mild heart condition. The doctor prescribed a "water" pill and a "heart" pill and rushed the man from his office. The patient had his prescription filled, knowing neither the names of the pills nor what they did. Several months later his physician told the man to quit taking the water pills for a while. The patient took the wrong one and ended up in the hospital.

"It's a true story," said Ms. Epstein. "And whose fault was it? The patient's? The doctor's?"

THE ELDERLY ARE by no means the only misusers of prescribed and over-the-counter drugs, she said. But they do run a higher risk of complications than other abusers.

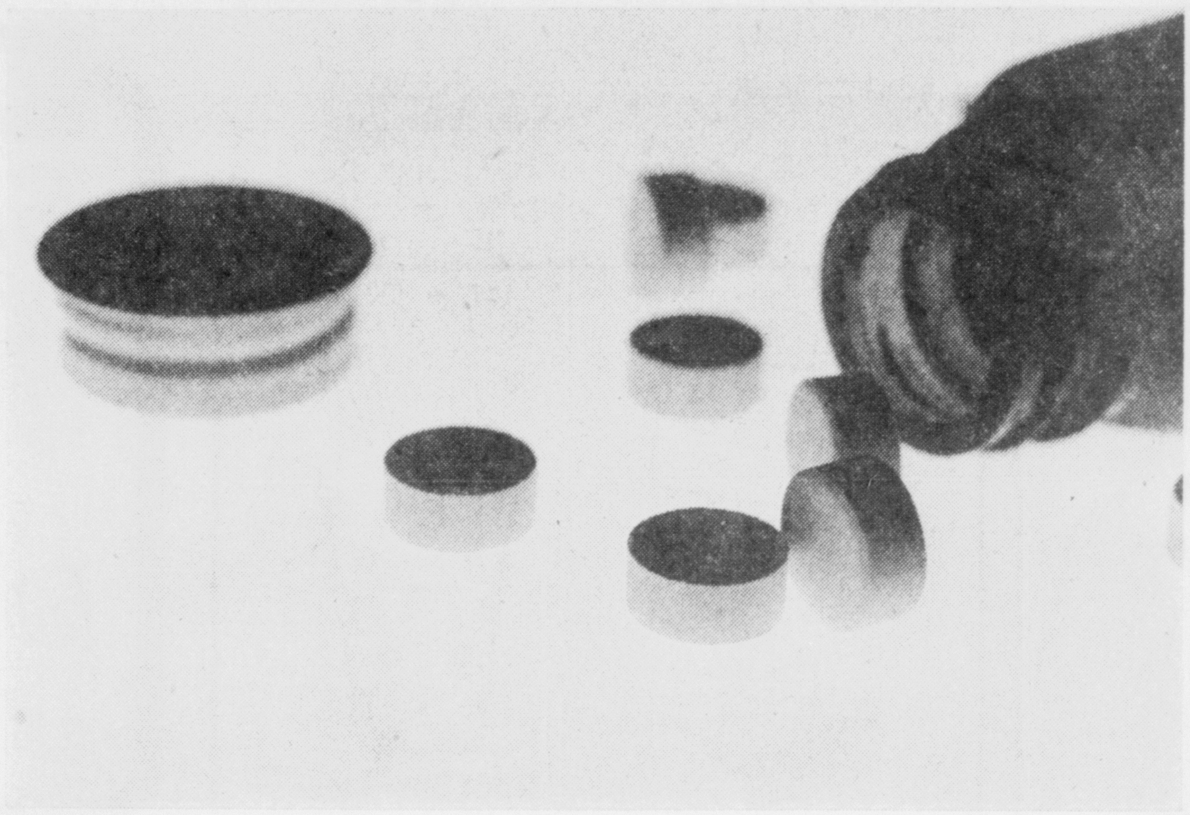
There are several reasons for this, according to Gaetano and Ms. Epstein:

• Elderly experience a greater number of chronic diseases, like diabetes, arthritis and high blood pressure, which require long-term drug therapy. They consume about 25 per cent of all prescribed medicines, but comprise only 10 per cent of the American population.

"The longer someone uses drugs, the greater the risk," said Gaetano.

• The senior's body chemistry changes over the years. His metabolism slows down and he doesn't excrete drugs as quickly as he did at age 30 or 40. Nor does he adapt quickly if he experiences side effects or allergies to drugs.

• Seniors are often treated for more than one health problem, resulting in several medications interacting at the same time.



• And medication dosages are commonly calculated for 25-year-old men in good health, said Gaetano, not older persons whose needs may be different.

For example the geriatric dose for Valium recommended in literature, said Gaetano, is two to two and a half milligrams once or twice a day.

"But most patients I know are prescribed five milligrams one to three times a day," he said.

The elderly's drug problem is not just dose-related, Gaetano continued. "Let's look at Indocin. Here is a drug used for treatment of arthritis — a condition virtually owned by senior citizens — and look at the listed side effects. Possible decreased vision, decreased hearing and nervous system disorders.

"So a patient on Indocin for six months goes to his doctor and says, 'Gee, doc, I can't see as well, and I'm forgetting things.' And the doctor says, 'What do you expect? You're 71 years old!' "

Said Ms. Epstein: "In older persons, one of the very first signs of drug reactions in general is mental disorder. If the patient was a 30-year-old and was disoriented or forgetful or whatever, the first thing we'd do is review his or her drug usage. But in the elderly? We just say they're growing old."

AT FRIDAY'S workshop, the two experts taught seniors to become active consumers: Know what the drugs are and what they're supposed to do. Know what the side effects are and how long it may take for the effects of the drugs to be seen. Know whether different medications are to be taken with meals or after, with milk or without, chewed or whole.

"One three times a day is just not enough to know," said Ms. Epstein.

They warned senior citizens against such practices as skipping pills to make them last longer and mixing drugs, including coffee, aspirin and over-the-counter laxatives, without telling a physician.

"And don't blame bad drug experiences or a lack of feeling better on doctors anymore," she said. "With rights to better health care come responsibilities. If you don't know something, you must ask. If the doctor rushes you out of the office, grab a nurse or ask the pharmacist."

"Medications are not bad. They are prescribed to make you feel better," said Gaetano. "But they are chemicals which will effect change. They must be respected."

Return to work

How to find the job that suits your requirements

by LUCIA MOUAT
(Second in a series)

The time has never been better for women to move into new job categories. Yet employment experts say many women returning to the labor force have a tendency to "think small," heading for such traditional jobs as secretary or teacher.

As a Peace Corps volunteer and administrator before her marriage, Sally Banks Craig found she had had enough of "pushing people and paper around." What appealed to her now was the field of communications, specifically, the technology of how electrons move from place to place.

So she put down $1,000 for an eight-month course at a vocational school ("The kind you see on a bus poster") in electronics engineering. The teacher was better than any she'd had in college or high school and the hours coincided with those of a school she found for her daughter. And when it came to finding a job, she had no trouble.

"MOST BROADCASTERS are under the gun to hire women and minorities, and they looked on me as a hot commodity," she recalls.

Once you have come to grips with your general interests and abilities, the experts urge a broad look at the vista of possibilities.

"Don't cut yourself off too soon," says one. "Nobody ever became something she never heard of."

• A good first stop is the career reference shelf of your local library. To get an idea of the range of possible jobs, scan the first volume of the U.S. Department of Labor's "Dictionary of Occupational Titles," which lists and describes the duties of everything from academic dean to awning hanger helper.

• A new Vintage paperback "On Your Own" by Kathy Matthews lists 99 alternatives to the 9-to-5 job — from square dance calling and dog walking to writing crossword puzzles and becoming a school bus driver.

• If you tend strongly toward the professions but age, cost of training or other barriers dissuade you, consider some of the layers underneath such as researcher, health technician and legal or landscape architect assistant. The training is shorter and cheaper.

• Worth an hour or two of study is the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics' "Occupational Outlook Handbook." On tap at your local library or state employment service office, it gives a rundown of the nature of the work, earnings and working conditions, training needed and employment and advancement prospects. Beginning journalists, for instance, with "exceptional writing talent" are expected to find favorable employment opportunities through the mid-1980s. However, experts warn that such predictions are at best educated guesses and often fast outdated.

• In general, the demand is building for specialists, technicians and paraprofessionals. Energy-related fields, architecture, sales, banking, medicine, counseling, skilled trades and environmental design are all expected to be areas of growing job opportunities. The demand for teachers and social workers has been declining while that for clerical workers continues to grow.

• "The best bets for women (in advancement potential and better pay) will be the fields which now employ the fewest women," advises Karin Abarbanel in her "Woman's Work Book" (paperback by Praeger, also Warner). It urges job seekers to take a careful look at the growth potential and the number of women already in the fields of their choice.

• Ask your chamber of commerce for a listing of local business firms.

• "Don't knock the Yellow Pages," insists one employment expert. "I once began a job search there which ended successfully."

• Read the newspaper want ads. Most counselors say they are worth regular reading if only, as one says, to get a "feel" for those jobs in your area which employers are "desperate" to fill.

Only 15 per cent of the federal government's employes work in Washington. In addition to such advantages as offering more part-time and seasonal jobs, the federal government now must count relevant volunteer work as experience and does better than many employers on in-house promotions.

• Contact the nearest federal job information center (800-555-1212 will give you the closest toll-free number) and ask for the "announcement" (Civil Service jargon) for the kind of jobs you are interested in. You will be sent the standard form 171 and the specifics of the written exam which is required for some fields such as procurement, personnel, management.

An increasing number of women, concerned about balancing their homemaking duties with a paying job, are using their homes as bases for everything from painting and catering to direct selling and professional consulting.

Those who have done it, however, stress that it is not easy.

"For me it was a disaster — I'm marvelous about wasting time," says one writer who tried it and quickly moved to an office.

IN ADDITION to the discipline required, increasing government regulation (one would-be caterer found she would have to redo her entire kitchen) and tighter rules on income tax deductions make working at home less of an advantage than it used to be.

"One thing you definitely need is an understanding husband," says Mrs. Susan Guerrein of Fairfax, Va., who works out of her home rather than in it two or three evenings a week. During the day she's in school full time earning her degree in horticulture; evenings, she sells plants for Party Plants, Inc., at neighborhood parties (in the same way some women have sold Tupperware).

Free counseling help is available from the more than 7,000 volunteers in the Service Corps of Retired Executives. Contact any of the various regional offices of the U.S. Small Business Administration, in Boston, New York, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Atlanta, Chicago, Kansas City, Mo., Fort Worth and Houston, Tex.; Denver, Colo.; San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Wash.; also, your local chamber of commerce for details.

AS YOUR FOCUS narrows, decide whether you need further education or training for the jobs which interest you. Check into whether or not the added dollar investment would eventually pay off in higher earnings. However, job experts warn against training for training's sake, and stress that some of the best training available is offered on the job.

If ever there were a time to sing your own praises, this is the piece of paper to do it on. Once you know what kind of job you're interested in, it is your opportunity to show a potential employer how your skills and experience can help him with the job he needs done. It should:

• Comprise no more than two pages.

• Be neatly typed.

• Be stripped of any negative qualifying phrases (such as "unpaid" work) and irrelevant detail.

• Integrate volunteer experience chronologically with paid experience.

• Stress accomplishments and functions performed rather than duties. (If you want to shift careers from teaching to administration, for instance, you would stress the communications, scheduling and organizing skills you picked up in teaching.)

"I found the skills I'd developed in volunteer activities were easily applicable to the business world," says one Washington homemaker who recently returned to work.

"Don't ever say you're just a housewife on your resume," agrees another re-entry who summarized all her experience (almost none of it paid) with prefacing lines such as: "I offer expertise in public speaking, fund raising, management . . ."

CONSIDER PREPARING more than one resume if you're looking into more than one field, although a covering letter can be tailored to stress different assets.

Some women report that slightly offbeat resumes have succeeded in getting attention and jobs. One who listed her marital status as "not very good" was called in first by an amused interviewer (she got the job) while another, who stressed her 15 years as a successful housewife and mother with the development of strong nurturing and listening skills, was hired by a public school system as a family and student counselor.

Aug. 3: Interviewing for the job.

Adopted child has right to discover his roots

Julie Martoccio

Women and children first

To: Is It Necessary? It is. When someone asks a question within the scope of this column, it is my duty to answer it. While I understand your concern and sympathize with your situation, I am sorry that I cannot forgo supplying information that your adopted child may read and act upon which would lead him to his natural parents.

I do not think you have considered the fact that this column is only one of thousands of sources of information. Newspapers, magazines and television are continually spreading the word, explaining where adoptees may receive help to establish their legal rights.

As recently as a week ago, a popular national TV program devoted most of its time to following a typical case of an adoptee seeking her natural mother after a judge permitted her to see her adoption record. And I assure you that there will be many more to come. Several states have already passed laws permitting adoptees access to adoption records. Doubtless, others will follow. But even if they should not, adoptive children may sue to enforce their rights.

I REALIZE THAT the whole problem and attempts at a solution can be a heartbreaking experience for everyone concerned. But it need not be. If your child knows he's adopted and that you love him, he will not reject you. And if he is the kind of a boy you say he is, he will be able to put everything into its proper perspective.

But we cannot fault an adoptee for wanting to know his or her roots. Don't we all? According to Yesterday's Children, the organization that tries to help adult adoptees find their natural parents, "It is a universal human need to know one's true identity and the identities of his forbearers."

This organization also presents the point that one has a right to know his family health background to aid him in making decisions about marriage and children. I concur in all those statements. Knowing genetic weaknesses can often mean the difference between life and death.

YES, IN SOME WAYS it is unfair to permit the opening of sealed records. But out of an unfortunate situation involving three persons, two of whom are consenting adults, the third, an innocent child, should have the paramount right.

I hope you will reconsider and should your child do what you fear he will when he's 18, that you will be prepared to face the inevitable, help him and keep his love and trust.

Laughter is legal: Is this the ultimate in equal rights? A Maryland woman who didn't like her name because she said it did not reflect the sex to which she belonged took her case to a judge who agreed that she had the right to change it from Toni Zimmerman to Toni Zimmerwoman! Ms Zimmerwoman, an 18-year-old coed, said that her original name went back to male chauvinist ancestors and that it infringed on her dignity. When asked why she did not change her name to Zimmerperson, the young lady coolly responded, "Zimmerperson is too impersonal."

Stringing Along With The F.T.C . . . Federal Trade Commission (FTC) decisions don't often hang by a thread, but there has been at least one exception. Good sport FTC made the exception when it said a certain article of clothing need not have a "how to launder" label attached to it. The reason? The FTC said that the label would be uncomfortable and unsexy . . . and that it would almost be as large as the object, which happened to be . . . a string bikini!

The doctor says

Weight clinic may be waste of money

My question concerns the reliability of these weight clinics advertised in some magazines.

My daughter started going to one yesterday, and the diet she showed me looks like the weight would fall off without the shot a day they claim helps. They charge $20 a week for the shot.

The diet has plenty of vegetables, chicken only twice a week, and fish once, no red meat.

I would sure appreciate hearing from you on this. I only have one child and her health is my main concern.

I couldn't give you a blanket endorsement or condemnation of the weight clinics advertised, there are so many.

But I can tell you that if your daughter is paying for human chorionic gonadotropin (HCG) injections commonly used by some weight clinics, she is wasging her month. In a recent study reported in the Journal of The American Medical Association, (Nov. 29, 1976) control patients getting salt water injections as placebos did as well as those getting the hormone shots. The diet and physical activity is the thing.

In that regard, unless that diet your daughter is on contains quite a bit of milk or cottage cheese I would guess it is nutritionally inadequate. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet to provide your daughter with a balanced healthy 1200-calorie diet that she can use. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y.

I hate to write this but I want to know if there is such a thing as a wood tick? I have something on my neck that feels like it's going in deeper and every once in a while it is like a needle being pricked into me. Some people tell me they'll kill you if something isn't done. So what can be done?

Yes, there surely are ticks and they may be in wooded areas. They occur in both the East and the West United States. Some of these, if they are infected, can cause Rocky Mountain spotted fever — even if the tick is from the East.

Regardless of what you have it should be looked at. Only that way can one be certain what it is that is bothering you. Go see your doctor. If it is a tick, he can take it out. If it is something else, it may need to be taken out too.

The peak period for "tick fever" is from May to September. In children, the illness may be misdiagnosed as measles to begin with, even though the times of year for measles and Rocky Mountain spotted fever are different. That should provide you with about as good a description of the onset of the illness as you can get, a febrile illness with a rash. Certainly any such illness, regardless of what the final diagnosis is, deserves medical attention.

Those who live or work in tick-infested areas can get some protection by having their clothing impregnated with tick repellents.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.

Unusual fruit pie uses mostly uncooked berries

Dear Roberta: Berries are beautiful this year. Can you suggest a special way to serve them for dessert?—Frances Boyle

Here's a lovely fresh blueberry pie. Caroline West taught me how to make it 20 years ago. It's fast and easy, and the result is different from any fruit pie you've ever tasted. The reason for its success? You don't cook most of the berries that go in, and they stay fresh and crunchy.

Bake a 9-inch pie shell and cool. Wash and drain 1 quart blueberries. In the top of a double boiler, mix 1 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons plus a smidgen more cornstarch, 1/8 teaspoon salt. Add 1 cup water and 1 cup berries and stir over hot water until thick. Remove from heat, add 1 tablespoon butter and the rest of the berries.

Mix and chill. Pour all into the pie shell just before serving and top with 1 cup sweetened, whipped cream.

Dear Roberta: Ironing a stencil on a T-shirt, I scorched some of the material. Is there any way to get the yellow out?—Joey Rollinger

First, dab glycerine generously into the stain, and then wash the shirt. If this doesn't work, soak into the scorch marks a liquid made from dissolving 1 ounce borax in 1 pint water, and then launder.

Dear Roberta: What kind of paint do you recommend for a bathroom that's prone to mildew?—Janine Ramsey Enamel paint is more resistant to moisture. There are also mildew-resistant additives for certain paints. Before buying one, ask your paint dealer if it will be suitable for mixing with your paint. If not, consider putting on a coat of metal-base primer first, especially around and above the bathtub.

ABC strike is no situation-comedy

Bud Photopulos has been preparing and reading news scripts at ABC television for 20 years. Today he is delivering new telephone directories while waiting for the end of a three-month-old strike.

"Being on strike is a terribly depressing thing. It's frustrating because they won't let you go back to work," said Photopulos, a Chicago resident. "You spend a lifetime developing skills for this job and then you can't go to work."

Some 1,500 members of the National Assn. of Broadcast Employes and Technicians are striking in a contract dispute over electronic news gathering, the hiring of free lance union technicians and network sharing of lighting and other technical setups. The strike really doesn't hit home with the average television viewer.

AS LONG AS ABC's local and network programming continues as usual, the viewer doesn't understand the consequences of such a strike. Union members and staffers at WLS-TV, Channel 7, an ABC-owned and operated station in Chicago do.

For them, the strike has become an ordeal and often a heavy burden. During the first few weeks of the strike in late May, station management enjoyed the novelty of assuming new duties such as operating a camera and keeping the newsroom moving. Most of those managers today are weary of the added chores.

The strike, at first, afforded members of the union time to attend a few baseball games, spend more time with their children and do some long-awaited jobs around the house. The pleasure of free time is gone. Now many strikers are looking for some other permanent work.

"I think there is a danger in having people out of their jobs for so long. If it (the strike) isn't over pretty soon, some of us may have to find jobs outside of the business," Photopulos said.

DEPENDING ON individual circumstances, each person's experiences and problems during the strike have been different.

As many of his union colleagues, Photopulos anticipated the strike and attempted to save money and prepare himself psychologically for the time he would be out of work.

Members of NABET are not collecting their regular salaries or union compensation during the strike. They are unable to draw any unemployment compensation under state law. Unless another member of their family is employed, they have no income on which to rely.

Part-time jobs that strike personnel have taken as a means of making some money include delivering telephone directories, bartending, waitressing, driving a taxi and doing odd jobs for homeowners such as mowing lawns and household repairs.

PHOTOPULOS' PROBLEMS are compounded because his wife, Georgia, is a cancer patient who must undergo special treatments several times each week.

"The doctors understand that I am out on strike and understand our situation and have responded quite graciously, but we constantly worry about the medical insurance I have that is one of my fringe benefits," he said.

The union assumed payment of its members' medical insurance when the strike began, but Photopulos worries about the union continuing payment of the premiums. "Without the insurance, one visit to the hospital could wipe us out," Photopulos said.

He and his wife are teaming up to write and sell free lance articles during the strike. Photopulos' children are too young to work, and he says he may begin looking for full-time work before the family has to begin dipping into its life savings.

IT HAS NOT BEEN easy for many ABC engineers to find part-time or full-time work in the electronics field.

"You have to be honest with people and tell them that you only plan to work there for a while, until the strike is over. And so they don't want to hire you because it takes time to train someone for any job," said Salvatore Buzzelli of Mount Prospect. He works at the WLS-TV studios in Chicago, coordinating the tape and film used in news and regular programming.

"So, you tighten up your belts and you tell the bank that your car and mortgage payments are going to be a little late, and you do the best you can," said Buzzelli, who has five elementary school-age children.

He and other engineers and technicians on strike say inactivity on the part of the network and their union officials has resulted in "a lot of hard feelings." The three-month-old strike is ripping at the core of the organization.

AT A UNION MEETING last week, members decided to stand firm on their demands despite the long haul. For some, the strike is not as devastating as for others.

"I'm living it up, it's like a long vacation that I've waited a long time for," said one Northwest suburban engineer. "I miss work a little, but I'm having a good time."

The egnineer's children are grown and living away from home, and he and his wife have sufficient bank funds to support them.

David Green, an ABC network field producer, recently divorced and living alone, got a full-time interim job to secure himself the income. As a licensed pharmacist, he recently landed a job in a pharmacy.

"I'm rather disenchanted with the whole thing. I've been sitting here for ten weeks wondering whether the network cares if I work for them or not. A majority of people in the network unit here have been preparing and submitting resumes. How long can you wait without work?" said Green, who plans to return to his ABC job as long as the strike is settled within 12 weeks. No one knows for certain when the strike will end.

"We all received a letter from the company last week saying they care. It's nice to get that kind of a letter when you're sitting at home wondering if anyone cares. But the letter talked in vague generalities and there are no serious negotiations going on. We're getting no money and the staff employes still working at the station aren't getting any sleep," Green said.

But, one of the biggest disappointments is knowing that someone else is doing your job while you are out and that the operation is moving along without you, said Ernie Nims, who writes and produces sports copy at WLS-TV and appears on camera during the weekend news.

Both Nims and Photopulos are members of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists as on-air reporters as well as members of the NABET union. They are unable to cross the picket lines of one union to go to work under the auspices of another.

"I'm grateful for the extra time the strike has given me to spend with my children and go to baseball games and watch the Sox and the Cubs win, but I miss work. We've all had to think twice about getting another job," Nims said. "What's frustrating is that the show goes on without you."

'Nudie Musical' low budget flick that shows it

NEW YORK (UPI) — What more efficient way to make a cheap movie comedy than to make one about the making of a cheap movie comedy?

In the case of "The First Nudie Musical" the inspiration stopped there.

Shot in two weeks on a budget of $200,000, the film was distributed briefly by Paramount Pictures last year and then dumped. The surprise is that a major Hollywood studio ever considered handling such a slipshod product.

"The First Nudie Musical" belabors the joke of its cheapness, throwing in just enough undraped flesh and unrehearsed dancing to justify its title.

STEPHEN NATHAN plays an aspiring movie mogul, Bruce Kimmel is the brainless director hired only because he is a backer's nephew, and Cindy Williams is Rosie the secretary. Williams, for anyone who wonders what a star of TV's "Laverne and Shirley" is doing in such circumstances, does not remove her clothes.

Kimmel also wrote the screenplay, music and lyrics and codirected with Mark Haggard, suggesting his simplemindedness on the screen may not have been an act.

"The First Nudie Musical" appears to have been made for the sophomore contingent of the midnight college crowd although it is very weak even by its own limited aspirations.

FEC investigation of battery industry

The Federal Trade Commission Tuesday announced an antimonopoly investigation into the industry that makes batteries for flashlights, radios and other appliances. The agency said its investigation "is to determine whether persons or corporations have conspired or attempted to monopolize or have monopolized all or any part of the primary dry cell battery industry." A primary battery is a nonrechargeable one, as compared to secondary batteries, such as those in cars, which can be recharged.

Burial vault strike talks break off

Talks have broken off between union officials representing striking burial vault workers and the Assn. of Burial Vault Manufacturers. Teamsters Local 786 and manufacturers' representatives "will keep in touch this week, meeting again no later than next Monday," federal mediator Sam Mazza said. Teamsters members previously rejected an employer contract proposal. The strike against Chicago area burial vault manufacturers began June 8. An American Wilbert Vault Corp. plant at 165 River Rd., Des Plaines, is among the facilities affected by the strike.

Chocolate bars sweet but shorter

Inflation dealt chocolate lovers another blow Tuesday as Hershey Foods Corp. said it had been forced to reduce the size of candy bars by an average of 12.8 per cent rather than raise unit prices. Hershey said the high price of cocoa beans forced the company's third reduction in less than a year.

Teamsters to strike contractors

The Illinois Conference of Teamsters said Tuesday it will strike contractors in 84 downstate counties Thursday. William Bounds, president of the Teamsters conference, said the conference has reached an impasse in contract negotiations with the Associated General Contractors of Illinois.

Penney to close food stores

J. C. Penney Co. said Tuesday it will close 28 food supermarkets in the next few months and that 19 others either will be sold or closed. The 28 food stores, whose closings already have been decided, are located in Treasury Discount or Penney Department stores. The other 19 are owned by Penney but situated in stores operated by other retailers.

United asks 2% Hawaii rate hike

United Airlines Tuesday asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to increase fares 2 per cent on most flights from the United States mainland to Hawaii. The fares would be effective Oct. 1 but would not cover most of the airline's charter flights, a company spokesman said.

Goodyear introduces new tire

A high-pressure, oval-shaped tire that can increase fuel economy by 4 to 10 per cent over current radials was unveiled Tuesday by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. Goodyear Chairman J. Pilliod Jr. said the new tire, which resembles conventional radials except that it is a little more squatty, could help automakers achieve government fuel economy standards of 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985. Instead of the 24 to 32 pounds air pressure recommended for today's automobile tires, with their characteristic underinflated look, Goodyear inflated its new elliptical tire to 35 pounds.

Profit-taking taps 6.06 Dow loss

Stocks fell Tuesday for the second consecutive day because of profit-taking and investor uncertainty about the economy's outlook. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which skidded 9.18 points Monday, dropped another 6.06 points to 908.18. Monday's loss was the worst in two months.

Profit-taking accounted for some of the decline. The Dow average was a 20-point winner in the six sessions before Monday. Further, institutions were selling basic-industry stocks represented in the Dow in anticipation of an economic slowdown later this year.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index lost 0.32 to 54.97 and the average price of a share decreased by 18 cents. Declines routed advances, 945 to 480, among the 1,909 issues crossing the composite tape. Big Board volume totaled 21,390,000 shares, up from the 20,430,000 traded Monday, the slowest session in two weeks. Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over-the-counter totaled 24,984,320 shares, compared with 23,448,160 Monday.

"I know he's going to propose. Just last night he asked if my job was steady."

Handicapped open industry doors

by LEA TONKIN

Cheryl Corts spends her working day taking telephone dictation and transcribing from office machines. An Arlington Heights resident, Cheryl is considered by her manager at Kemper Insurance Companies in Long Grove as a reliable employe. Cheryl has been blind since birth.

Personal commitment and specialized training have been important in Cheryl's transition to the working world.

Overcoming the transportation barrier that prevents many disabled persons from holding suburban jobs, Cheryl has arranged for a ride to work with a fellow employe at Kemper.

Many handicapped persons are not as fortunate. Roadblocks to employment include the lack of transportation and training, state workmen's compensation regulations, which discourage hiring of handicapped persons, and employer reluctance to let mentally and physically disabled individuals show their capabilities.

CHERYL CORTS came to Kemper following a series of training programs where she learned homemaking and office skills. She credits counseling and training help from the Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Palatine, and from Wheeling High school advisers for her success in landing a job at Kemper.

At Kemper, Cheryl said she knows how to make her way in the office and cafeteria. "I work with nice friendly people, and I know they'd be glad to help me," Cheryl said.

"She does very good work, very accurate," said Beatrice Koch, Cheryl's supervisor. Cheryl's attendance during the four years she has worked at Kemper has been "excellent," Mrs. Koch said.

"You can't help but admire industries that take the time to work with the handicapped," said Janice Murphy, a placement counselor at the Countryside Center for the Handicapped in Palatine. The agency serves clients with mental and physical disabilities.

A ONE-TO-ONE relationship with suburban employers is the best way to explain the capabilities of individuals in the center's rehabilitation workships, Ms. Murphy said. The agency has a follow-up counseling program for companies willing to hire Countryside Center clients as office, factory and maintenance workers.

"Handicapped is a word we use because people relate to it," said Kendra Hummel, rehabilitation services manager at the Countryside Center. "Rehabilitation is important too. It's helping people to be more productive."

Changing attitudes are reflected in increased acceptance of handicapped employes, Ms. Hummel said. Countryside's training programs include clerical, retail sales and custodial work.

The lack of mass transportation is often a barrier to the employment of handicapped workers, said vocational counselor Mark Wickman of the Palwaukee Industries sheltered workship, 65 E. Palatiine Road, Wheeling. Some individuals remain in nursing homes or other institutions because they have no means of travel to a job, Wickman said.

"WE'RE TRAINING people here who have been in nursing homes," Wickman said. Some of these clients will move to a community living facility. The next step — to an independent status — is more difficult. "Transportation is our biggest problem," Wickman said. Until this situation is remedied, Wickman said, he's "somewhat pessimistic" about outside placement prospects.

State workman's compensation laws also "work against an employer's willingness to hire a handicapped worker," said Leonard Day, labor relations specialist for the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, Chicago.

"There's no credit allowed for what we call a pre-existing condition, such as heart disease or multiple sclerosis," Day said. "If the condition is aggravated by conditions on the job, the company is liable for the whole shot."

REVIEW OF such is needed, said James Jeffers, director of the Illinois Div. of Vocational Rehabilitation. Jeffers said the Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977 and the Tax Reform Act of 1976 provide tax incentives for employers to hire and provide facilities for disabled workers.

"If people make the effort they find that the handicapped worker is probably better, because he's not a jumper," said Sally Gaver at Ray Graham Assn. for the Handicapped, Addison.

Disabled individuals trained in custodial work, for example, successfully make the transition from the agency's sheltered workshop to outside employment. Although some employers are indifferent to handicapped persons, Mrs. Gaver said, "we're also opening new doors."

Parents not giving kids old college help, officials say

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — Have parents become too selfish to give up their pleasures on their children's behalf? That's the opinion of many college aid officers. They see an increasing number of students having to rely on student loans rather than parental funds to pay their way through college. When the young people graduate, they have tremendous debts to pay off.

A story typical of the attitudes of many parents is told by John Reeves, financial aid officer of the State University of New York's College of Environmental Science in Syracuse.

He says his department recently put together an aid package for a student, requiring no loans but asking the parents to pay $300 a year. The parent told Reeves he had a "better" offer from another school — one that asked no money from the parents but required the student to take a big loan. The parent will save a little money, but at great cost to the child.

THERE ARE NO reliable figures available on the national level of student indebtedness. But aid officers on a number of campuses put the average undergraduate loan at around $5,000. Graduate students may owe $10,000 or more. Under a new law passed last year, graduate students in health fields may borrow up to $50,000.

Many parents encourage children to take loans because, as students, they can get the loans at 7 per cent interest, paid by the government during the years they're in school. The parents promise that after graduation they will take over the student's payments.

One aid officer told my associate, Anne Colamosca: "Many parents have come to believe sacrifice is old-fashioned. It's every man for himself."

Today's penniless parent has a mixed bag of problems. If he's bought a slightly smaller home, or made do with fewer consumer goods in order to amass more savings, his fixed expenses wouldn't be so high. On the other hand, parents feel they want to give their young children (as well as themselves) the best standard of living they can afford.

INFLATION HAS made it impossible for many families to get ahead of the expenses they built into their budgets many years ago. The increasing incidence of divorce also siphons off money that otherwise might have been used for college.

At age 18 or 19, middle-class youngsters have little understanding of how hard it can be to repay $5,000, especially on annual salaries of $8,000 or so that they'll likely have when they first start working. So they're willing to take big loans for fancy colleges, rather than go to a less expensive school.

The full import of what they've done hits students after graduation. The youthful "mortgaged marriage" has become commonplace in the 1970s. A young couple today may start out with $10,000 in debts, which makes it hard to start families, buy a house, or treat themselves to consumer pleasures.

Ex-Albert clerk denies Korea bribe ties

SUZI PARK THOMSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Suzi Parkernment agents," the statement said.

Thomson, a South Korean native who long has been a mysterious figure in the investigation of South Korean influence peddling in Congress, said Tuesday in her first public statement "I have no knowledge of any bribes or pay-offs on Capitol Hill."

The naturalized American citizen, who worked as a $15,000 a year clerk in former Speaker Carl Albert's office, met behind closed doors for nearly an hour with Reps. Albert Quie, R-Minn., and Bruce Caputo, R-N.Y., both members of the House Ethics Committee, and staff investigators.

Emerging later with her attorney, Phillip Hirshkopf, Mrs. Thomson told reporters that she refused to testify in the ethics panel investigation of the South Korean case unless her appearance was at a public session.

"I FEEL I cannot testify in closed session because of invariable leaks, quoting people out of context and misstating things that were said and because of misconduct by some of the committee council (sic) with regard to me and other witnesses in the past," she said in a written statement. She did not elaborate on her claims.

"I have never been offered nor accepted any money, bribes or gifts of any value from South Korean sources or for doing any favors of being involved in any deals concerning any South Koreans or South Korean gov-

"I know nothing of any South Korea agents or operatives on Captiol Hill," she added.

Mrs. Thomson, who earlier was granted immunity from prosecution in return for her testimony before a federal grand jury investigating the case, added that "I have enjoyed a personal relationship with one Congressman and been friends with many Congressmen, Congressional aides and others which is perfectly natural for people working on Capitol Hill."

"SUCH PAST relationships are matters in my private life and do not affect the national interest of the United States in any way," the statement said.

Mrs. Thompson, who hosted several parties attended by South Korean officials and members of Congress while she worked as a clerk in Albert's office, acknowledged that "I have made several trips to Southeast Asia with Congressmen at the invitation of Congressmen."

"On all five trips the Congressmen present were under official itineraries with cooperation of the American embassy and on official government business.

"I am sure I was invited to go on these trips because of my South Korean birth and the fact that I speak several Southeast Asian languages," she said.

"It was only in this vein that I was asked to accompany legislative delegations to Southeast Asia," she said.

Leaders march on! Cubs, Reuschel win

by ART MUGALIAN

Cub coach Harry Lowrey, an old Wrigley Field favorite, remembers when the wind started blowing out more often than once a month.

"It was 1950," said the man they call Peanuts. "Before that, the wind always blew in off the lake."

Rick Reuschel, the winningest pitcher in the majors, hardly remembers the Great Turnaround. The Cub righthander was just one-year-old and struggling to get out of the playpen, not to mention the bullpen.

MENTION THE Wrigley Field wind to Rick now and he'll pay his respects — like he did Tuesday when a 12 MPH breeze from the northeast "saved" Reuschel's fourth shutout of the year, a 3-0 victory over the defending, but slump-ridden, World Champion Cincinnati Reds.

"They hit a couple that would have been out except for the wind," said Reuschel, now 14-3 after hurling his third blank-job in his last five starts.

"But when they're hitting lots of ground balls it doesn't matter which way the wind is blowing," he added.

The prevailing northerlies, much to the chagrin of Bobby Murcer and other Cub home run hitters, seem to have returned in the summer of '77, perhaps marking another epoch in the life of Peanuts Lowrey.

But the gale pushed back a George Foster blast in the seventh and held up Dave Concepcion's eighth-inning liner that was ticketed for the bleachers in center. For small favors, Rick Reuschel is grateful. As are the Cubs, who, by virture of the victory, will stay in first place at least another day.

NO WIND WAS GOING to stop Jose Cardenal's homer onto Waveland Ave. in the fifth inning. It was the second HR of the season for Jose, who was batting leadoff while Cub shortstop Ivan DeJesus was dropped to eighth.

Cardenal, once again the subject of trade rumors, had doubled in the first off Red starter Fred Norman and scored on Larry Biittner's triple. Jose got ovations from the huge crowd of 38,113 when he flied to the warning track in the third and when he struck out in the seventh.

Reuschel has now pitched 50 consecutive innings at Wrigley Field without yielding an earned run. He won for the 10th straight time in the windy friendly confines. He hasn't lost at Wrigley since last year.

"I feel better today than I usually do," admitted Reuschel. "Cincinnati has given me a lot of problems in the past so it's great to beat them but even greater to shut them out."

IT WAS THE FIRST time Reuschel had ever completed a game against the Reds and he did it by allowing just five hits and striking out six, including Johnny Bench twice. Rich walked nobody, finishing in two hours and three minutes.

"I see no reason to spend anymore time at the ball park then necessary," Reuschel said without the trace of a grin.

Reuschel's sinking fastball, as usual, had the opposition beating the ball into the ground, this time for 11 putouts. Biittner made three outstanding plays at first base, including the one that ended the game.

"Biittner's been making plays like that for me all year," said Reuschel. "And now he's starting to hit the ball hard like he was in late May.

"I hope we're starting to pull out of it now," added Rick, who nonetheless minimized his role as staff stopper.

"I just go out there when it's my turn," he said. "I don't think in terms of a stopper. My only objective is to play in the World Series."

WHOEVER PLAYS IN the World Series this year, the odds are it won't be Cincinnati, the two-time defending champs. The Reds have lost eight in a row and their record stands at one game above .500.

"That Reuschel is a tough pitcher," said Reds' manager Sparky Anderson. "Right now I'd have to say he's the favorite for the Cy Young Award."

Reuschel's only real pinch came in the sixth when Joe Morgan and Ken Griffey reached second and third after two out. But Rick got Dan Driessen on a fly to right.

The Cubs gave Reuschel an insurance run in the sixth when Jerry Morales doubled and scored from third on George Mitterwald's infield hit.

Before the game, Cub manager Herman Franks had expressed surprise at the rumors involving Cardenal and Boston lefty Bill Lee. Franks also indicated that reliever Bruce Sutter might have been able to pitch an inning or two if he were needed. Sutter, of course, wasn't needed.

Sox sock it to Tigers; Zisk's bat drives in 5

by BOB GALLAS

One advantage to being on the White Sox is that Chris Knapp doesn't have to pitch against his teammates. But if he did, his strategy is simple — "throw and duck."

Knapp's opponent Tuesday was the Detroit Tigers and the big righthander threw seven strong innings to earn his ninth win of the season against four losses. However, as usual, he shared the spotlight with Sox hitters, particularly Richie Zisk, who homered, tripled and drove in five runs to key the Sox 8-3 victory.

The win was the sixth in a row for the streaking Sox, who are 18-4 in the month of July, and enabled them to expand their advantage to five games, their longest lead this season over the idle and second-place Kansas City Royals.

KNAPP IS THE fifth man in manager Bob Lemon's five-man pitching rotation; in other words, the bottom of the totem pole. The 23-year-old hadn't pitched in 13 days but his performance was marred only twice, in the first on a two-run Rusty Staub homer and in the eighth, when he loaded the bases before yielding to reliever Dave Hamilton.

"I lost a little toward the end," Knapp admitted afterward. "I would have liked to have finished but the situation dictated he (Lemon) bring someone else in there."

Zisk's homer, a three-run shot in the third inning, earned him a standing ovation from the crowd of 23,099, who demanded — and got — Zisk to take a bow at the top of the dugout before they'd stop clapping. Chet Lemon got the same treatment when he popped a two-run homer in the fourth, also off starter and loser, Dave Roberts.

Both blasts broke dry spells. Zisk, who leads the club in homers with 20, hadn't connected since July 1, while Lemon, hadn't had a home run since exactly one month earlier, June 26.

"I'VE PUT THE home run out of my mind recently," said Zisk, who has had five-RBI days twice now this season. "I've even been choking up lately.

"I was hitting about .280 with lots of homers but I was striking out an awful lot, and leaving too many men on base," Zisk continued. "I've just been trying to drive the ball, just make good contact lately."

Staub's opening inning homer gave the Tigers a quick 2-0 lead, but the Sox came right back in the bottom of the frame with a run on Ralph Garr's leadoff triple and a ground out by Alan Bannister, which drove in the run.

Zisk's homer in the third gave the Sox a 4-2 lead which they never relinquished and came after Jorge Orta was safe at first on a close play that could have ended the inning.

ORTA HIT A two-out smash up the middle but second-baseman Tito Fuentes somehow came up with the ball and lofted a throw towards first. First baseman Jason Thompson stretched out to nab the throw and first base umpire Dick Garcia ruled that the throw pulled Thompson off the bag and Orta was safe.

Even subsequent television replays could not prove Garcia right — or wrong.

Zisk then stepped in with runners at first and second and kissed Roberts'

Logan Square, Park Ridge collide

Logan Square will finally get their first shot at American Legion tournament action tonight when the Lions face Park Ridge at 8:00 at Recreation Park in Arlington Heights.

The game opens the final round of the Ninth District tournament, a best-of-five affair. While the Lions were improving their record to 32-6-2 last week, Park Ridge was battling Schaumburg and Tattler Post to earn the right to compete in the league finale.

After eliminating Schaumburg in two games, Park Ridge did the same to Tattler, a team that wiped out Rolling Meadows' chances a few days earlier.

LOGAN SQUARE SPLIT with Park Ridge the two times the teams played together during the regular season. The Lions won the first encounter, 6-2, before being nudged in the second, 6-5.

A third game was won by Logan Square on a forfeit.

Lion coach John Wendell said his team is ready, adding that pitching and defense will be the key factors in the playoff. Wendell will start Phil Czosnyka as his pitcher in tonight's opener. The rotation will follow with Mike Marshall, Tim Prokof and, if necessary, Tom Brady.

All games of the district title match will be played at Recreation Park. Thursday's game will begin at 6 p.m. with Friday's scheduled for 8 p.m. If the playoff goes beyond three games, they will be played during the weekend.

LOGAN SQUARE HAD a bye until this point because it finished with the best record (9-4) in the district, except for Arlington.

But Arlington was not involved because they already had a spot in the Cook County tournament as the host team. The winner of the Logan Square-Park Ridge series will advance to the Cook County tourney, which opens Aug. 4 at Rec Park.

Phils split with Dodgers

From Herald Wire Services

Greg Luzinski and Bake McBride slammed homers Tuesday night and Jim Lonborg pitched a two-hitter to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-1 triumph over the Dodgers for a split of their doubleheader at Los Angeles.

Glenn Burke doubled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and the Dodgers added two more runs on a wild pitch and passed ball to win the opener 5-1. The split left the Dodgers 11 games ahead of Cincinnati in the National League West and the Phillies one game back of Chicago in the NL East.

Luzinski's solo homer in the fourth inning, his 22nd of the year, got the Phillies on top but the Dodgers tied it in the bottom of the inning when Teddy Martinez got an infield hit off Lonborg's leg, went to second on an out and scored on Lonborg's wild pitch. The Dodgers were befuddled by Lonborg the rest of the way, with Steve Garvey's two-out single in the seventh the only other hit.

IN PITTSBURGH, John Candelaria and Rich Gossage combined on a four-hitter and Ed Ott slammed his fifth homer to lead the Pirates to their sixth straight victory, a 3-2 decision over the Houston Astros.

Candelaria notched his 11th victory against three losses, but had to leave the game in the eighth inning when struck on the left forearm by Wilbur Howard's line drive single which loaded the bases. Gossage came on and gave up a sacrifice fly by Enos Cabell but got Cesar Cedeno to end the inning.

Frank Taveras tripled in the third off losing pitcher J. R. Richard, 9-8, and came home with the first run on Dave Parker's single. After Cedeno tied the game with his fifth homer in the fourth, Omar Moreno tripled in the fifth and came home with the lead run on Taveras' sacrifice fly.

IN ST. LOUIS, Keith Hernandez knocked in two runs with an inside-the-park homer in the first inning to help Bob Forsch to his 13th triumph and lead the Cardinals to a 4-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Lou Brock singled to open the Cardinals' first, stole second and scored on a two-out single by Ted Simmons to give St. Louis a 1-0 lead. Hernandez then crashed a liner off the center field wall which bounced past Rowland Office and by the time left fielder Gary Matthews picked it up, Hernandez had scored.

St Louis added a run in the fourth as starter and loser Dick Ruthven walked Heity Cruz with two outs and Mike Phillips followed with a run-scoring double.

IN SAN DIEGO, Dave Freisleben became only the second Padre pitcher to hurl a complete game this season and rookie Gene Richards drove in the winning run in the ninth inning for a 4-3 triumph over the Montreal Expos in the first game of a doubleheader.

Freisleben, 3-5, stymied the Expos on eight hits and struck out seven in going the distance in the 101st game played by San Diego this season. The only other complete game was turned in by Randy Jones on May 4, a stretch of 74 incomplete games to set a major league record.

DUSTY DISGUST. Cincinnati's Ken Griffey has only one route to go, that being to the dugout, after getting tagged out by Cubs' shortstop Ivan DeJesus in the first inning Tuesday. It was the start of a bad day for the Reds when Griffey was caught stealing as they eventually lost to Rick Reuschel and the Cubs, 3-0. It was the eighth straight defeat for the world champs.

Jackson's home run gives Yanks 5-4 victory in 10th

From Herald Wire Services

Reggie Jackson belted his 17th home run to lead off the bottom of the 10th inning Tuesday night and give the Yankees a come-from-behind 5-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in New York.

The loss reduced the Orioles' first-place margin to a single game over Boston, while the third-place Yankees are two games behind.

Jackson rifled a 3-1 pitch from loser Scott McGregor, 1-2, who was making his first appearance in three weeks, far beyond the right-center field fence to give reliever Sparky Lyle, 8-3, the victory.

The Yankees tied the game dramatically in the ninth inning when Cliff Johnson, pinch-hitting for Bucky Dent, hit a two-run homer off reliever Tippy Martinez. Martinez had replaced Ross Grimsley after Grimsley walked Roy White to start the inning.

IN BOSTON, right-hander Don Aase, brought up early in the morning to boost the sagging Red Sox pitching corps, struck out 11 batters in his first major league appearance in hurling a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The victory snapped a three-game Boston losing streak.

AL baseball

Aase, a top prospect in 1976 before suffering tendonitis, replaced veteran reliever Tom Murphy on the Boston roster and started less than 12 hours after arriving in Boston. He gave up nine hits and walked two.

Rick Miller broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning with a single that scored Butch Hobson who had singled and moved up on a Denny Doyle single.

IN TORONTO, Willie Horton slammed three doubles and a single and Kurt Bevacqua contributed three RBI, including a two-run homer, to spark the Texas Rangers to a 14-0 rout of the Blue Jays behind the four-hit pitching of Bert Blyleven.

Blyleven recorded his 10th victory of the season against nine losses with his fourth shutout of the year.

Texas, which set a club record for extra base hits with nine, shelled rookie starter Jim Clancy, making his major league debut, for five runs in the first two innings.

He gave up a run-scoring single to Claudell Washington and a run-scoring double to Horton in the first and Bert Campaneris tripled home two runs in the second and scored on Washington's sacrifice fly.

Woodfield Invitational Swim Meet

Approximately 1,000 athletes are expected to compete in the first ever Greater Woodfield Invitational Swim Meet this weekend.

The meet, hosted by the Camp Duncan YMCA at Schaumburg's Meineke Pool, features a wide age spectrum. Divisions range from eight and under to senior (19-years-old and older).

To enter the meet, swimmers had to hit specific qualifying marks and be certified, Amateur Athletic Union athletes. The AAU is sanctioning this meet.

Although Woodfield Invitational winners do not earn automatic advancement to any other meet, they do receive awards and trophies.

The meet begins Friday. Warmups are 4 p.m. and finals at 5.

Saturday morning, warmups start at 7 o'clock and finals at 8. In the afternoon Saturday, the warmups will not start later than 12:15 with the finals following one hour later.

Sunday morning's and afternoon's times are the same as Saturday's.

Admission is free to anyone having a Schaumburg Pool pass. For all others, the ticket prices are $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

White Sox roll on; Zisk drives in five

first pitch goodbye.

"It was a fastball, down the middle. That's the type of pitch I should handle," said Zisk.

LEMON'S BLAST the following inning gave the Sox a 6-2 margin and Roberts departed after issuing a walk to Eric Soderholm. Rookie right-hander Jack Morris, just called up to fill the spot vacated by the injured Mark Fidrych, came on and the 21-year-old proceeded to retire 10 in a row before the Sox added two more runs in the seventh when Zisk — who else — tripled deep to center with two men on.

Knapp was breezing along after Staub's homer in the first. He retired 12 straight before John Vockenfuss singled with one out in the fifth. Knapp, who struck out eight and walked only two, retired 21 of the 23 men he faced after Staub going into the eighth.

Knapp got the opening hitter in the eighth, but then gave up consecutive singles, then a walk to load the bases for Hamilton. Hamilton struck out the first man he faced, Staub, but then walked in a run with a pass to Steve Kemp, before getting Thompson to fly out to end the inning.

The win puts the Sox 23 games over the .500 mark. The biggest Sox bulge over the .500 mark came in 1965, when that club finished 28 games over.

The Cubs, who through a quirk in the scheduling played an afternoon game at Wrigley Field Tuesday, drew close to 40,000 so the combined Chicago baseball attendance Tuesday was 61,212.

SOX SHORTS: Wilbur Wood (5-2) is the Sox probable starting pitcher tonight in the final game of the Detroit series . . . Fernando Arroyo (5-9) will start for the Tigers . . . Jorge Orta extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a double and single in three trips . . . The Sox team batting average of .285 leads the American League . . . The Sox now have 121 team home runs, just 17 short of the club season record of 138, set by the 1961 and 1971 teams.

Zender rules PGA event by seven shots

JEFF NORDLUND
of The Herald staff

CRETE — Bob Zender, who had to fight exclusion from this tournament only last year, won the Illinois PGA championship for the second straight time at Lincolnshire CC here Tuesday.

Zender, a regular touring professional but not a club pro, easily defeated the rest of the field of PGA players from the state, finishing seven strokes ahead of runner-up Steve Benson from Glen Oak CC.

Listing himself as unaffiliated, Zender demolished both the 51-player field and the par-72, 6,153-yard course with a final round of 67. The Skokie resident scored eight birdies and three bogeys.

ZENDER CONCLUDED the 54-hole event with a 10 under par 206. Benson, who broke a course record with a 29 front nine, shot 68 to end up with 213. Jim Holmes from Ravinia Green CC was third at 216, and former champ Bill Ventresca from Rolling Green CC followed at 217.

Benson birdied the first six holes and nearly made a race of it when he and Zender took the turn toward the final nine holes just two strokes apart. But Zender, who began the day with a six-stroke lead, played steadily while Benson suffered a triple-bogey on the 180-yard, par-3 10th hole.

Zender also began well with birdies on five of the first six holes before bogeying the eighth and ninth holes to finish the front nine with 33.

"I GOT OFF really well today," the 34-year-old Zender said afterward. "I had some moments that weren't too fine — I wasn't hitting my driver well — but I kept the ball in play.

"I took just 14 putts on each nine today and made only 30 in both rounds Monday," he said.

Zender had to threaten court action last year to stop from being excluded from play in the state PGA tournament. Zender's status as a touring pro, rather than as a club pro, prompted the action.

The winner of the Illinois tourney qualified to play in the national PGA championship to be played Aug. 11-14 at Pebble Beach CC.

THE LAST golfer to win the state title twice consecutively was Bill Ogden from North Shore CC in 1971-72. Ogden had won the title five times in all.

Benson, whose parents were members at Lincolnshire for 35 years, wasn't too surprised that after birdies on the first six holes he had gained just one stroke on Zender.

"When someone told me what Zender was doing, I just laughed," the 30-year-old Benson said. "After I birdied the first four holes, I figured I had picked up a couple of strokes and anything could happen.

"But on the 10th hole I hit a five-iron and the ball went far left. It hit the cart path and just rolled. I tried to squeeze the next shot through some trees, but the ball hit a limb.

"FROM THERE, I chipped short of the green, got on and two-putted," Benson said.

Benson's six on the 10th hole gave Zender a comfortable five-stroke lead with only eight holes remaining to play.

A stiff wind was largely responsible for keeping Monday's scores higher than those Tuesday. The nearly ideal conditions and familiarity with the course contributed to Tuesday's assault on the venerable No. 1 layout.

Ventresca, who won the championship in 1974, shot an even par 72. Other area professionals and their scores were: Remo Crovetti, Mount Prospect, 227; Stan Ferguson, Inverness, 235; Emil Esposito, Mount Prospect, 231.

THIS YEAR on the tour Zender had finished as high as fourth at the Quad Cities Open July 7-10, and he was 30th in the National PGA championships last year.

In other golf news, the Illinois Open is scheduled to be played Aug. 8-9 at the Elgin CC.

Slump eats away at Reds' Sparky

Byline report

Art Mugalian

No baloney issues forth from Sparky Anderson's mouth. Maybe a little bit of Italian beef, but no baloney.

"This is just a slump," said the manager of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, gobbling down the first of two big post-game sandwiches Tuesday at Wrigley Field.

The slump is beginning to eat away at Sparky.

THE CUBS AND Rick Reuschel had just blanked Anderson's Reds, 3-0, giving the world champs eight losses in succession and pushing them a full 11 games behind the West Division leaders, the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Anderson, one of baseball's most successful field bosses, said he planned no changes or shakeups for the immediate future. He said he had no comment on the way the Dodgers have been playing. He said he didn't think his team was about to throw in the towel.

The Reds' manager wasn't being evasive. He simply had no answers.

He finished his first Italian beef deluxe and lit a cigaret. Some people starve themselves out of a depression.

"When you're going bad, everything goes bad," said Anderson. "Yesterday we lost 9-8. Before that, it was 14-13. Today we run into the other team's best pitcher. This is the most I've ever lost in a row."

THE EIGHT-GAME losing streak is the Reds' legthiest going all the way back to 1966, four years before Anderson arrived on the scene. His current team, which he calls his best ever, has a record of 48-47.

"What's my first baseman doing?" asked Anderson. "He's hitting .300. What's Johnny Bench got? He's got 22 homers. He had 17 last year. This is a better team than last year."

Sparky had called a team meeting before Tuesday's game. Locked doors, the whole thing.

"I just cursed 'em out," Anderson said.

NO MORE TEAM meetings are scheduled.

The Reds got a strong pitching effort Tuesday from ex-Cub Freddie Norman, who allowed just three runs and eight hits in eight innings of work. Reuschel tossed a shutout, though.

In today's doubleheader, the Reds are supposed to throw rookie Mario Soto and "franchise" Tom Seaver, who cost Cincinnati nearly its entire farm system.

Pitching, even with the acquisition of Seaver, would appear to be Anderson's major problem. In addition to Bench, first baseman Dan Driessen, and Ken Griffey, who is hitting .320, the Reds have the leading HR and RBI man in the majors, George Foster. But they have dealt away (or lost through free agency) Rawly Eastwick, Pat Zachry, Santo Alcala, Will McEnaney, Don Gullett and Gary Nolan. All pitchers.

"JUST ABOUT EVERY game on this road trip we've lost by one run," said Pete Rose, who just Monday became the all-time leader in hits among switch-hitters. "It's amazing how many doubleplays we've hit into with the bases loaded.

"But all nightmares end," Rose added.

Sooner or later.

World Series vets

Even though the New York Yankees were no challenge for the Cincinnati Reds in the 1976 World Series, they have won more titles (20) than any team in major league history. The most recent was in 1962 when the Yankees edged San Francisco, 4-3.

Quarantine laws necessary

Dave Terrill

Just dogs

Strict laws protect humans and animals from the health threat of rabies. Although a mandatory rabies vaccination program has drastically reduced this threat to humans, dog and, to a lesser extent, cats, many pet owners complain about these laws, especially the quarantine requirements for biters.

Every year thousands of Illinois dogs and cats are quarantined as rabies suspects. Any animal that bites or scratches a person is legally required to undergo a 10-day quarantine. Usually, an animal can only spread rabies 10 days before it dies from the disease.

Vaccinated dogs and cats must be quarantined also, but they can stay at home unless the bite is on the victim's head or face or if the wound is severe. A licensed veterinarian examines the animal on the first and 10th days of quarantine to certify that it is free of rabies.

HOWEVER, IF THE animal does not have a current or 3-year rabies vaccination, it must be quarantined in a veterinary hospital at the owner's expense. These regulations may vary slightly from county to county.

If the dog or cat dies of rabies within 10 days, its victim must receive a series of shots to fight the rabies virus. These injections are also mandatory if the biter can't be located to certify that it's free of rabies. Therefore, by keeping up with rabies vaccinations you are protecting yourself, your neighbors and friends and your pet.

As pointed out in an article by Dr. Jack L. Tuttle, Small Animal Extension Veterinarian, University of Illinois, quarantine procedure are expensive and inconvenient but they are ecessary to protect human health.

For example, dog bite wounds are 10 times more common in to 9-year-old children than measles and mumps combined. And nearly 85 per cent of all bites occur on or next to the animals' homes.

AS INCONVENIENT as it may be to quarantine your pet, pity the animal. Since most bites aren't caused by a rabid animal, our pets are isolated as punishment for following their own instincts. It must be this way, even though most bites are the result of human error.

Northwestern gets OK for pro tennis

Northwestern University can sponsor a World Team Tennis match between the Indianapolis Loves and a Soviet Union team in Evanston Wednesday, Cook County Circuit Court Judge Richard L. Curry ruled Tuesday.

The decision came in a suit filed by the city of Evanston seeking a preliminary injunction to bar the university from hosting a professional tennis tournament.

Curry said Evanston cannot enforce a city ordinance prohibiting professional sporting events at the university while Northwestern has an application pending with the city for a zoning variance.

However, the judge said his decision does not authorize the university to use Dyche Stadium or the McGaw Hall complex for other professional sporting events.

Evanston officials said the ordinance banned professional sports at the school to protect the surrounding neighborhood from excessive traffic and crowds.

Federal judge approves Nets' move

NEW YORK—A Federal judge approved an agreement between the New York Nets and the New York Knicks basketball teams Tuesday under which the Nets will move from the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island to the sports complex on the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J.

Although details of the agreement were not to be disclosed until an 11 a.m. news conference today, Nets lawyer Albert Besser said, "the Nets definitely are coming to New Jersey." He said the team will play this season at Rutgers University and hope eventually to move to a new area at the Meadowlands.

Judge Robert L. Carter, who presided at a two-day trial of the territorial dispute between the two National Basketball Association clubs, directed that the agreement be sealed at the request of the parties.

Foreman finally settles with Vikings

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Chuck Foreman agreed to a two-year extension of his contract with the Minnesota Vikings Tuesday, ending a lengthy and bitter contract dispute.

Vikings' vice president and general manager Mike Lynn said the club's leading rusher has agreed to terms extending his contract through 1980.

"There never was any question about the value of Chuck Foreman to the Vikings football team," Lynn said. "He showed leadership qualities last year that were important to us and anybody could see his talents on the football field. The disagreement was over what those abilities are worth."

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

New York to apply for 1984 Olympics

NEW YORK — Despite predictions of a $225 million shortfall, New York city will apply this week to host the 1984 Summer Olympic Games, Mayor Abraham Beame announced Tuesday.

Beame said he would submit the application Friday to the U.S. Olympic Committee with the "firm belief" that a projected gap between costs and revenues in hosting the games would be made up by federal, state and private financing.

"Bringing the Olympic flame to New York City would be a tremendous boost for the Big Apple in both psychological and economic terms," Beame said.

A study by former state Urban Development Corp. Chairman Richard Ravitch estimated the games would generate 35,000 temporary jobs and attract up to 1.5 million visitors.

Man surrenders; horse still missing

LEXINGTON, Ky. — William M. McCandless, wanted by the FBI in connection with the theft of a thoroughbred mare believed in foal to former triple crown winner Secretariat, surrendered Tuesday to authorities in Lexington.

State police and FBI agents had been after McCandless in connection with the theft of the horse from the Claiborne Farm in Paris June 25.

An FBI spokesman said no information was available on the whereabouts of Franfreluche, the Claiborne Farm mare for whom a $25,000 reward had been offered. The mare had been valued at about $500,000 by farm owner Seth Hancock.

McCandless was taken into custody by officers of the Kentucky State Police and taken to Paris, where he will face charges of theft by unlawful taking before Bourbon County authorities, the spokesman said.

Communication problems plague Red Sox

by GIL PETERS
UPI Sports Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — Darrell Johnson had a dismal season in 1976 before he was fired by the Boston Red Sox. The trouble could be traced directly to his inability to communicate with his players.

Don Zimmer has the 1977 Red Sox in contention and is in no immediate danger of being fired. But he still is having communication troubles with a portion of his team — the maligned pitching staff.

Make no mistake. The pitching staff has been poor, save for reliever Bill Campbell. No one has been consistent.

AND TUESDAY night Campbell was ineffective as the White Sox rallied for an 8-7 victory that Zimmer called "as bad a loss as we've had all year."

Campbell inherited a 6-3 lead from Luis Tiant at the start of the seventh inning, but the Sox tied the game in the eighth, three runs coming across on Jim Spencer's three-run homer, and won the game on Brian Downing's drive to left in the ninth.

Zimmer does not know how to deal with pitchers, who historically have the most fragile egos in baseball. Apparently new pitching coach Al Jackson also has been unsuccessful in smoothing the feathers of Luis Tiant, Rick Wise, Ferguson Jenkins and Reggie Cleveland.

THE KID GLOVE treatment may not produce better pitching performances, but, conversely, such a treatment hardly could make matters worse.

Boston's crew of veteran pitchers are angry, to a man, although some are more vocal than others. Tiant has stopped complaining about being forced to pitch every fifth day. "I always have pitched every fourth day but the man doesn't want to do it that way. What can you do, except go out and try your best."

Commentary

Wise, who threw a popup to Zimmer earlier this month instead of handing him the ball when pulled from a game, has said many times he must pitch in a regular rotation to keep his rhythm. As proof he cited good performances in six of his past eight starts and said the two bad outings came after he was bypassed for another pitcher on his regular turn to pitch.

JENKINS, THE TALL and silent type, had said little about the state of pitching affairs until after he was beaten by Chicago on Sunday. When asked why he had been inconsistent in compiling a 7-7 record, he said, cryptically: "I can think of 100 reasons but I don't want them printed."

Cleveland, roughed up for four hits and four runs by the first four Indians batters last Saturday, was upset with Zimmer for being pulled prematurely. The following day he said he should not have talked that way to the manager, then volunteered to go to the bullpen to work out his problems. More likely, Cleveland is so fed up with the way in which he and the other starters are treated that he would prefer to work out in the bullpen where he can throw every day.

Now many baseball fans must be saying, "To bad for these guys with their big bankrolls and eggshell egos. They're paid to pitch whenever the manager asks them and they should do what they're told."

BUT THE KEY to being a successful manager is keeping all players in a winning frame of mind. Zimmer does not talk to his pitchers regularly. Instead he holds occasional meetings in which he tells all of them that he is doing his best.

"It was more of a statement than a meeting," said Bill Lee, who has not talked directly with Zimmer in months. Lee never got along with Johnson, either, but at least the former manager kept giving the controversial left-hander a chance to pitch.

Zimmer would not even talk about Lee in recent weeks. Asked to assess Lee's performance on Sunday against Chicago, Zimmer said, "No comment."

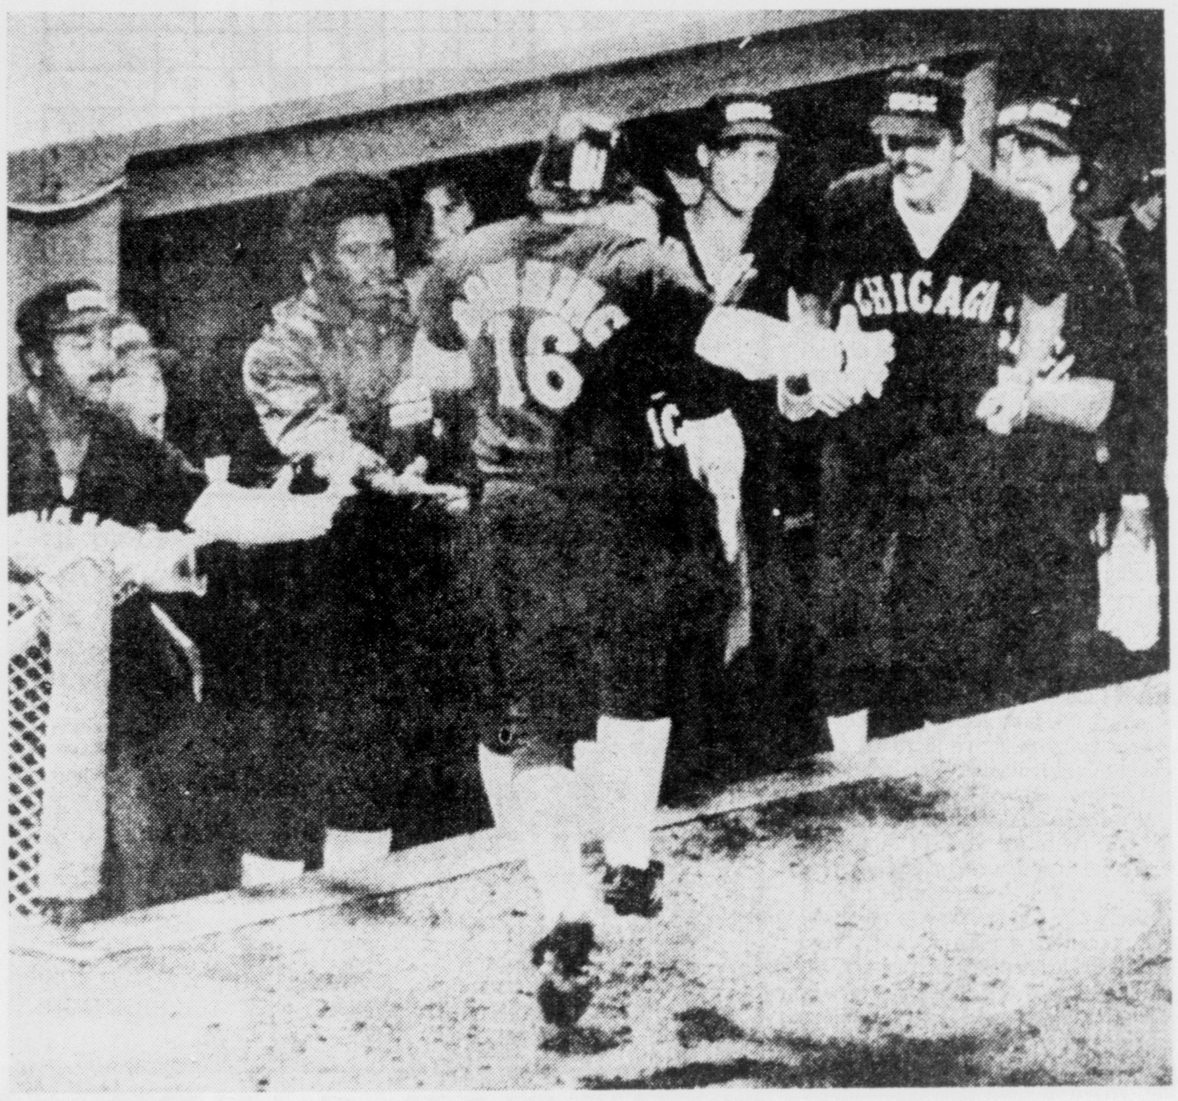
IN REALITY, THE sparsely used Lee pitched rather well, despite giving up three runs in 4-2/3 innings. He gave up one long homer but the other two runs came as a result of his own fielding error and a blooper that fell between three fielders, allowing a runner to score from first base.

Throughout the season, Zimmer has put pressure on his pitchers instead of removing the burden from them. He juggled the rotation so Lee would pitch against the Yankees, ignoring the fact that the left-hander would have eight and nine days between starts.

He has kept Tiant unhappy by ignoring the pitcher's wish to start every fourth day. Even at 36, Tiant still is the best pitcher on the staff. Every effort should be made to keep him happy because Tiant is the closest thing the Red Sox have to a consistent winner.

YET ZIMMER is from the school of hardnosed ballplayers who have become hardnosed managers. He wants things to be done his way, because he feels it is his neck on the line.

The trouble is that Zimmer is tying his own noose by applying a 1950's attitude to a 1970's baseball team.



BRIAN DOWNING (16) of the White Sox jumps for joy as he is greeted by happy teammates in dugout after hitting the winning home run in an 8-7 victory over the Red Sox. The White Sox jumped on Boston's relief ace Bill Campbell for the come-from-behind success Monday night.

Larry Brown retires from pro football

CARLISLE, Pa. (UPI) — Running back Larry Brown, who gained more than 1,200 yards to lead the Washington Redskins to the 1972 Super Bowl, surrendered to chronic knee problems Tuesday and retired from professional football.

Redskins' Coach George Allen said the final year of Brown's playing contract will be honored and that the 29-year-old Kansas State graduate will work with the club's public relations department, speaking at clubs and hospitals.

"George Allen and I arrived at a joint decision with (team physician) Dr. Stanford Levine that it would be physically impossible for me to endure the stress and strain of another football season," said Brown.

ALLEN characterized the retirement as "for the good of everyone" and added: "Larry deserves to go out on top and not hang on."

Brown, the Redskins' all-time leading rusher with 5,875 yards, gained 5,037 of them in his first five years, 1969-73. He ran for 1,125 yards in one season and his 1,216 yards in 1972 took Washington to the Super Bowl.

Brown, 5-11 and 204 pounds, first injured his right knee during the 1973 pre-season in a scrimmage with the Philadelphia Eagles, but recovered to gain 860 yards that year.

THE KNEE was reinjured in the 1974 inaugural against the New York Giants when he was hit by Brad Van Pelt. He gained just 430 yards that year, 352 the following season and just 56 on 20 carries in 1976.

Win at bridge

New lead sets this 3 NT

What do you lead from the West hand against South's three-notrump contract? If you know what East holds you can lead the queen of hearts, continue with the ace and jack and collect six quick tricks.

If you haven't had that look at the East hand you are likely to open a spade. If you make the normal lead of the three spot your partner will either play the queen (an advanced play) or the ace followed by the queen (a normal play.)

In the first case declarer will rattle off 11 tricks; in the second case, he will make 12. Either way you will be most unhappy about the whole thing.

If you are playing that you lead second best (not fourth best) from a long suit not headed by one of the four top honors you will open the seven.

Your partner will win with the ace, note the fall of the eight from declarer, study the hand awhile, see that you have undoubtedly led the top of nothing or second best of nothing, shift to the four of hearts and wind up with the same six defensive tricks a heart lead from your hand would have produced.

Divining rod 'magic' from common sense

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Danny Lynch, 11, of Merrillville, Ind., for his question:

WHAT IS A DIVINING ROD?

Drinking water for many people comes from wells. Even in many cities, where a central reservoir is the starting point for a network of water pipes extending to individual homes, the supply for the storage tanks is from underground sources and wells. In most rural areas people depend on individual wells for the water supply necessary to maintain human, animal and plant life.

Just how do you go about picking out the right location to drill your water well?

If you are smart, you will engage an expert to find the right spot. In many areas water is just below the surface and the supply can be reached with very little digging. It doesn't take too much of an expert to find water in this type of area.

In some locations, however, it is necessary to have geologists and engineers with modern equipment locate deposits of underground water.

At one time most wells were located with the use of a divining rod which also has been called a dowser. The divination method to locate underground water continues to be used in many parts of the world today.

Here's how the system works: The operator holds a forked twig with two ends close to his body and the stem pointing forward. As he walks along over an area under which water is supposedly located, the stem of the divining rod suddenly is pulled downward toward the earth. This, he says, is where you will find water.

Scientific reports, however, indicate that if success with the divining rod is obtained, it is most likely a result of the diviner being sensitive to visual clues which might indicate which location is best for the well.

Any slight relaxation of the divining rod will cause the stem to turn down with a pointing movement and often the operator is not aware that he himself controls the action. There's no scientific reason for a stick of wood to turn toward hidden underground water.

Divining rods call upon some type of magic for their work. It is fun to believe that they can really work — and usually the common-sense of the person using the device is what makes the magic happen.

Andy sends the book 200 Illustrated Science Experiments to Mary Zanck, 11, of Spokane, Wash., for her question:

HOW ARE TEARS PRODUCED?

Two lachrymal glands, one located in each eye, produce a secretion of tears that continually bathe the cornea of the eyeball. Tears help to clear out foreign particles, such as hair and dust, and also keep the eyes from drying out. Without tears the eyes would most certainly dry out and the result would be a loss of vision.

The glands are located behind the eyelids. With each blink of the eye, an additional amount of fluid is squeezed from the glands.

When people feel such emotions as grief, anger or sometimes great joy, the glands become tightened and squeeze out larger amounts of tears. And that's how we cry.

Tears are a salty solution that also contain substances that fight bacteria and infection.

were tested against a number of higher tar brands. The results proved conclusively that 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco does boost taste without the usual increase in tar.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar than MERIT.

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And you can taste it.
